

Chamber to coordinate bicentennial

City Council members Wednesday night designated the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce as the official clearing house for events and activities occurring within the 1976 bicentennial celebration here.

The request for the Chamber of Commerce to serve as the official agency to coordinate all bicentennial activities in Washington C.H. during the 1976 event was submitted to Council members by Chamber president Bruce Galloway and presented by executive vice president James Dunn.

"Inasmuch as the 1976 bicentennial celebration is fast approaching and with many events and activities to be conducted and coordinated locally, the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce feels that a mandatory clearing house should be established for the orderly planning and carrying out of these functions," Galloway's prepared statement said.

Galloway said the Chamber of Commerce will now proceed to summon representatives of various Fayette County groups, including government, service clubs, fraternal organizations, business and industry, clergy, education, youth, news media and other interested citizens to insure that Washington C.H. and Fayette County participate in a professional manner in observance of the nation's 200th birthday.

The prepared statement said the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce felt the realm of activities will undoubtedly include a number of social and related events during the bicentennial week as well as many interesting programs which could include some type of lasting memorial to the residents of Washington C.H. and Fayette County.

"With the approval of this request we will act to the utmost of our ability to coordinate the prementioned activities in an orderly and professional manner," Galloway concluded.

President Gerald R. Ford last week assisted the nation launch the bicentennial era during ceremonies held in historic Philadelphia.

It was in Philadelphia two centuries ago that Patrick Henry, George Washington, John Adams and other colonial dissidents began the revolutionary events that led to the Declaration of Independence on July 4, 1776, by the Second Continental Congress.

Monarch under arrest

Selassie deposed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Military reformers pledged to democracy and a new deal for the peasants today deposed Emperor Haile Selassie, the world's oldest and longest-reigning monarch, and arrested him, sources in Addis Ababa reported.

An American eyewitness said a detachment of troops moved the 82-year-old emperor from his marble-lined palace in the central Addis Ababa at 10:30 a.m. and took him to the headquarters of the 4th Army Division, a ramshackle walled enclosure near the railroad tracks.

Troops were deployed at key points. The city had been put under a nighttime curfew at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Addis Ababa was reported quiet, but Western embassies advised foreign residents to stay indoors.

The airport in Addis Ababa was reported closed, and commercial communications to Ethiopia were cut.

Earlier, reliable sources in the Ethiopian capital reported that the military had detained the emperor's only surviving daughter, Princess TegagneWork, who is the wife of an aristocrat accused of massive embezzlement of public funds.

The sources said the detention of the princess could signal the roundup of other members of the royal family.

The Armed Forces Coordinating Committee, a group of anonymous officers who have been directing the gradual military takeover of Ethiopia, has accused the emperor and the feudal landowners who with him controlled the country of embezzling millions of dollars, encouraging bureaucratic corruption and doing nothing to alleviate the effects of the drought which in the past two years killed an estimated 100,000 persons.

The military committee on Wednesday accused the emperor of refusing to return billions of dollars from secret Swiss bank accounts and other repositories abroad.

Selassie himself has been under virtual house arrest for several weeks, confined by the army to a radius of three miles around his Jubilee Palace, which the reformers have nationalized and renamed the National Palace.

Ohio millionaire drawing scheduled

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Backers of the first $1 million Ohio Lottery drawing, assigned to Thistledown Race Track in Cleveland, predict a festive atmosphere.

"It should be like a carnival, like the good old days," said Ohio Racing Commission Chairman Charles Ginsberg Jr.

The racing commissioners unanimously approved the drawing for Sunday, Oct. 27, after the feature race that day in the Thistledown infield.

Ginsberg unsuccessfully tried to talk lottery officials into taking $50,000 from their fund to make it a $100,000 race.

"We have no vehicle to come up with the money for the purse this year," Dickinson said.

"We plan to make it a fun day," said Mike Mackey, general manager for the track.

Mackey promised reduced parking and admission rates for the day of the drawing and said concession prices likely would be sliced, too.

If the Thistledown experiment is successful, additional $1 million drawings will be staged at other race tracks around the state, Dickinson said.

Buckeye 300 cash awarded

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — A Ft. Thomas, Ky. man walked away with $300,000 in the third Buckeye 300 lottery drawing today with all the top prizes awarded to out-of-staters.

Allen M. Mynatt said he planned to save his winnings for his family.

Julia Schlosser, of Temperance, Mich., won the second prize of $60,000. The $30,000 prize went to Marian Cropper, of Highland Heights, Ky.

The $15,000 winners, all Ohioans, were Mark Pogany of St. Clairsville; Fred L. Benbow, Cleveland; James A. Simmons, Urbancrest; John T. Bernet, Steubenville, and Russell M. Hines, Van Wert.

The drawing was held at Western Woods shopping center in suburban Cincinnati before several hundred spectators.

JAMES DUNN

Galloway said the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce will work with the Ohio Chamber of Commerce's placement bureau in securing "another highly-trained young professional to fill the executive vice president slot."

Dunn, son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Dunn, U.S. 35-S, his wife, Sally, and their two children, Scott, 3, and Julie, 1, presently reside on U.S. 62-S.

CHAMBER DIRECTORS also heard a number of reports during Wednesday's meeting.

Norman Schiering reported on the Rattlesnake Creek and Upper Paint Creek watershed tour and program which will be conducted here Sept. 18. Galloway said the Chamber of Commerce should be strongly represented at the event.

A report on a fund-raising auction which will be held on the Courthouse lawn was given by Paul Johnson. Chamber members will be seeking permission to use the Courthouse lawn for the auction from the Fayette County Board of Commissioners Monday morning.

Advertising for the fund-raising project will be conducted next week. Area businesses and industries have donated items to auction including 20 tool boxes from Mac Tool, Inc., and a load of stone from American Aggregates, Inc., Ohio 41-S.

Galloway said Washington C.H. City Council Wednesday night designated 'Hung jury' results in theft case here

A Fayette County Common Pleas Court jury was unable to reach a verdict Wednesday in the grand theft trial of Benny W. Laytart, 25, of 115 Water St., and was declared a "hung jury."

Laytart now could possibly face a new trial at a later date on the grand theft charge.

The seven-women, five-man jury reported they could not reach a decision and were returned to the courtroom shortly before 2 p.m. Wednesday. Judge Evelyn W. Coffman asked them to try to reach a decision one more time and the jury retired for another hour. They reported out again at 3 p.m. and they were still hopelessly deadlocked. The final vote was believed to have been 8-4 in favor of conviction.

LAYTART was charged with grand theft in connection with the theft of a bicycle from the Rev. Gerald Wheat residence, 220 N. Hinde St. on May 26. He was tried on the felony charge since he had a prior theft conviction. Seven persons testified during the course of the two-day trial.

Members of the jury were Delbert Brown, James M. Wilson, Helen Miller,

Accepts Sandusky position

Dunn resigns Chamber job

Bruce Galloway, president of the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce, announced the resignation of James W. Dunn as executive vice president during the regular monthly board of directors held Thursday morning in the Chamber office.

The 27-year-old Dunn, who assumed the Washington C.H. Area Chamber of Commerce position in 1972, has accepted a job with the Sandusky Chamber of Commerce where he will serve in an executive vice president's capacity.

Dunn's resignation becomes effective Friday, Oct. 11.

THE CHAMBER'S board of directors accepted Dunn's resignation with "great regret and with best wishes for a prosperous and rewarding future."

In his letter of resignation, Dunn indicated that he wanted to follow professional chamber management as a career. To accomplish this, an opportunity in the Sandusky area, a growing recreation-oriented section of Ohio near Lake Erie, could not be overlooked, he said.

"We have been very fortunate to have kept a sharp young man like Jim as long as we have," Galloway said. "We send a grateful Chamber's best wishes along with Jim and his family."

"It's the unanimous wish of the board to continue the Jim Dunn tradition here," Galloway commented when questioned about a replacement for the executive vice president post.

Robert C. Satchell, Solewig D. Maxie, William E. Cupp, Inez Stuckey, Doris C. Bitzer, Helen R. Hixon, Ruth Lanman, Frank Bayes, Lula Haugen.

The case was presented by James A. Kiger and John H. Roszmann, Fayette County prosecuting attorneys. Robert Simpson was the defense counsel.

Pardon appeals disclosed told the Post that he was unaware of any pardon request but did not believe that Haldeman would use a threatening tone because of his "generous and kindly attitude" toward Nixon.

Haldeman's wife said in California that her husband could not comment on the story because he is under court order not to discuss Watergate-related matters.

Ehrlichman could not be reached for comment.

Haldeman and Ehrlichman go on trial with four other defendants in the Watergate cover-up case Sept. 30. Ehrlichman already faces a prison term of 20 months to five years on his conviction in the Ellsberg break-in.

Meanwhile, the lawyer for two convicted Watergate figures says his clients will take quick advantage of President Ford's newly clarified offer to study pardon requests individually.

"We do intend to submit an application," Daniel E. Schultz, attorney for Bernard L. Barker and Eugenio R. Martinez, said in a telephone interview on Wednesday. He said the forms would be submitted to the Justice Department early next week.

Barker and Martinez, both members of the anti-Communist Cuban community in Miami, pleaded guilty for their roles in the original Watergate burglary and were convicted by a jury in connection with the break-in at the

Hays raps Ford meets

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Rep. Wayne Hays told the Ohio Association of Realtors Wednesday President Ford's conferences with a number of economic advisors probably would lead to more confusion on the part of inflation.

The Ohio Democrat also attacked Ford for pardoning former President Nixon and criticized the appointment of Nelson A. Rockefeller as vice president.

He said if Ford wants to be president he should "get rid of his Exxon aides."

He referred to the Senate appropriations subcommittee hearing on Wednesday at which Chairman Joseph P. Montoya, D-N.M., told General Services Administration chief Arthur Sampson he was "given a snow job" by former Nixon aides.

This is an emotional thing," Steed said. "Unless we're able to bring out a tight, well-documented bill it will be in serious trouble. And from the tone over in the Senate I think it may be in serious trouble there, too."

He said many congressmen "don't want to approve a nickel" for Nixon because of President Ford's pardon for him.

But Steed said Nixon, as well as any other former president, deserves transition money and said he hopes his subcommittee can cut it to expenses so well justified that Congress will approve it.

"This is an emotional thing," Steed said. "Unless we're able to bring out a tight, well-documented bill it will be in serious trouble. And from the tone over in the Senate I think it may be in serious trouble there, too."

NEW YORK (AP) — The premiere week orgy of new network TV series resumes tonight, with ABC and NBC each setting loose two new ones. I'd have to say ABC's "Harry O" with David Janssen is the best of the lot.

Then comes ABC's "Paper Moon" and then NBC's "Sierra" and that one just because of the scenery. Judgment is temporarily withheld on NBC's "Movin' On" because advance peeks weren't possible before deadline time.

"Harry O," about a former cop retired on disability pay because of a bullet in his back, is in the genre — French for third-generation imitations — of those fine old detective movies of the 1940s.

You know the kind — the private eye walking down the misty street, hard-eyed, puffing on a cigarette, his off-screen voice saying, "No matter how hard I tried, I couldn't get the Stromboli affair out of my mind."

Same deal with Janssen's new series, in which he plays a somewhat seedy private detective in San Diego who usually takes buses — a TV first, a blow for ecology — en route to solving various crimes.

Tonight's salvo has Harry at his beach house, working on his rancid boat. The phone rings. Probably a client. Harry sighs. His off-screen voice says, "Where I wanted to be was Idaho Falls, Idaho, because that was where the circus was playing that day."

Rhodes blasted by big labor

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Republican gubernatorial nominee James Rhodes has been accused by the Ohio AFL-CIO of maintaining a "fraudulent friendship with working families."

The union said in its monthly newsletter that the former governor, while in public office, was inactive in the fields of workmen's compensation, unemployment insurance, minimum wage, occupational safety and health and taxation.

Toothaches all in your mind?

By ANDY LIPPMAN
Associated Press Writer
CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Got a toothache? Why not go see a psychiatrist.

According to Dr. Loran F. Pilling, a Minneapolis psychiatrist, many dental complaints are only outgrowths of a person's mental condition.

"We know for a fact that many emotional problems mimic dental disease," said Pilling, who was here Tuesday speaking to a convention of the Ohio Dental Association.

"That is why dentists must learn to cope with clinical situations in which various psychological factors also play a significant role. Dentists must be able to deal with many aspects of the patient as a total person."

Understanding a patient can often lead to solutions of dental problems.

"Depression, one of our most common conditions, is often confused with dental problems. The patient who is depressed will complain of dentures that don't fit, a mouth that has a bad taste or a pain in certain parts of the body, including the mouth."

And while many people like to complain that there is something wrong with their teeth, Pilling said that is the exact area that they least want to be treated.

"The mouth is a highly emotionally charged area of the body," said Pilling. "It is a highly visible part of our body and we don't want anything to happen that will change it."

The problem for dentists is two-fold. First, most people don't come to the dentist for family counseling.

"People who go to the dentist want something done to them," Pilling said. "They want the dentist to come up with something wrong with them."

"Besides, people don't want to go to a dentist and see a doctor of depression, they want to go and see a doctor of teeth."

The desire to find something wrong has often caused persons in the medical world to bend too far in that direction.

"There is sometimes a tendency to try and find something that might not be there," said Pilling. "There might develop an insecurity that a medical specialist might not have done a good job because he did not find anything wrong."

What Pilling advocates is a return to the country doctor ethic of healthy doses of understanding — a kind of low profile psychiatry. He advocates dentists relating to the patient and trying to spot depression in the same way they can spot tooth decay.

"To fully understand pain, today's dentist is learning more about emotional problems and thus avoiding undue dental procedures," Pilling concluded. "Instead the dentist is spending more time with patients to discuss the results of tests and pointing out reasons why, for example, extracting painful teeth may not be the answer."

The first known American printing of the popular song "Yankee Doodle" was a part of Benjamin Carr's "Federal Overture" in Baltimore in 1795. The origin of the song is unknown.

Cold and clammy hand

In the dying days of the Nixon administration, the Rev. John McLaughlin astonished the multitudes with his philosophical tight wire act. This is not to say that his purported moral justification for the Watergate coverup and other shenanigans was convincing, but it did hold one's attention.

Father McLaughlin's taste for complex views of relatively simple matters is seen again in his comments on authoritative word that his White House sojourn is about at an end. The word came from Press Secretary Gerald F. terHorst after his discovery that the controversial Jesuit priest was on his press office payroll. McLaughlin, he said, will soon "finish his tour of duty with the White House." He also noted that the job McLaughlin has held down "is going to be abolished."

There is nothing mysterious about this: it is part of the usual changing of the guard when a new administration takes office. Father McLaughlin appears not to accept this simple fact of political life. He told reporters: "I do not believe President Ford is laying a cold and clammy hand on my back. . . and easing me out the front door." Perhaps not—but as the old song puts it. Somethin's gotta give.

THESE DAYS . . . by John Chamberlain

Who will grab the baton?

What makes political prognostication so chancy in the U.S. today is the strangely parallel behavior of both major parties. Everyone knows that the definitive voting in 1976 will be done in the South and the West, in the states of the so-called Sun Belt that from Florida all the way to California.

Nevertheless, the Ford Republicans, in their campaign to restore party harmony, are primarily concerned with minorities (the blacks, the urban dispossessed) who will probably vote Democratic anyway, and with the minorities' major habitat in the industrial Northeast, which is not where the "new" Republican Party has had its steadily developing strength.

As for the Democrats, they were, until very recently, bogged down in a quarrel for the soul and substance of their National Committee, in which the McGovernites continued to get the ear of party chairman Robert Strauss.

To be sure, gestures are now being made in both parties toward placating the country that lies beyond the reach of the New York Times and the Washington Post. After getting a proper dressing-down from George Meany's AFL-CIO, whose COPE (Committee on Political Education) is out to kill the strict application of the "McGovern rules" that handed the 1972 Democratic convention over to the young, the women, the poor and the blacks at the expense of many long-term party workers, the Democratic National Committee is now turning to something called "affirmative action." The idea is to let the local organizations "encourage" minority representation, but not at the immediate expense of the seasoned regulars, who felt excluded in 1972 by the McGovernites.

The Republicans of the South, who were ignored when Ford picked New Yorker Nelson Rockefeller for Vice President, have been mollified a bit. Clarke Reed of Mississippi, head of the Southern Republican Chairmen, has said his group finds it can work with a "rich Eastern Yankee" for the present. Rockefeller is on trial with the Southerners, who will take him if he stops "putting sugar on his grits."

The trouble with the placating moves in both parties is that they don't really add up to the sort of "Southern strategy" that could win in 1976. It is not enough for Strauss and the Democratic National Committee to give in to COPE and George Meany.

Those conservative Democrats who have been bolting their local organizations in presidential years to vote for an Eisenhower, a Nixon or a George Wallace third party are not going to settle for a candidate whose primary responsibility is to a narrowly prejudiced official labor hierarchy. And the "new" Republicans throughout the Sun Belt will surely demand a more widely representative slate in 1976 if Rockefeller fails to demonstrate that he has changed more than his tastes in eating hominy.

With both major parties putting the industrial Northeast and the capital-L Labor first in their 1976 considerations, there will be plenty of confusion out where the decisive voting is taking place. If some bona fide Westerner or Southerner—a Wallace for the Democrats, a Reagan for the Republicans—takes the bull by the horns and decides to stump the country in the primaries for a revived "Southern strategy," who knows what might happen in one or the other big national conventions?

The first party to come up with a national ticket designed to catch the emotions in Florida and in California, in Tennessee and Texas and in the agricultural regions everywhere, will surely win the Electoral College even if New York and Massachusetts should happen to be lost.

The "Southern strategy" (it was actually a "non-Northeast strategy") won for Nixon in 1968 and 1972. If it failed to put Barry Goldwater over in 1964, it at least changed the nature of the Republican Party in a way that insured victory for Nixon later on. Besides, Goldwater had to contend in 1964 with Lyndon Johnson, who happened himself to have Southwestern credentials.

Who knows, if both of the major parties simultaneously turned their backs on a proven strategy, a third party Reagan-Wallace ticket might capture enough states to win the White House.

The boomerang has been known to return to the thrower, even after striking the ground.

Ohio Perspective

Malpractice costs being investigated

By ROBERT E. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio has been caught in an information gap.

The state doesn't exactly know the effects of rising medical malpractice insurance rates and big court settlements for negligence have on the cost of medical care in Ohio.

The state Department of Insurance wants to close the gap quickly. It will try to begin to nail down the problems next week at a public hearing in Columbus.

"These hearings, along with a series of fact-finding hearings regarding Blue Cross and hospital rates, will assist the department in establishing a coordinated attack on the continuing problem of inflationary medical costs," said Kenneth E. DeShetler, state insurance director.

The day-long hearing, which will include spokesmen for the medical and insurance industries, along with consumers, will be held Sept. 18 in the Ohio Department Building.

Like many other states, Ohio only malpractice insurance has done in adding to medical costs.

Information is sketchy. A 1972-1973 study by the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare provided some facts. An insurance department white paper containing proposed regulations for Blue Cross in Ohio provided others.

The HEW study said Ohio hospitals have to pay the second highest malpractice premiums in the United States and listed an average of $66,000 a year for a 400-bed hospital—$165 bed.

The same report said Ohio physicians have to pay an average of $770 a year—17th highest in the nation and seven times more than they have to pay in the mid-1960s.

Surgeon's premiums, the report said, were $2,300 annually and also 17th.

Ohio dentists pay about $40 a year, but, at that, are 16th highest in the country, the HEW report said.

The insurance department white paper said the rate for Ohio hospitals may be, in part, a result of a lack of a hospital licensing law.

WCH plumber former cycle daredevil

BY MARK THELLMANN

He sat there, his eyes twinkling as his mind drifted back to the days when he was professional motorcycle ramp jumper with "Ward Beam's Auto and Motorcycle Daredevil Show." How thrilling it had been taking off from the ramp to become airborne for a few treasured seconds and hearing the crowd roar with applause - mixed with the horror and pain of not making it to the destination ramp below and hearing your skin screaming on the track - gravel etching its way deep into the flesh. His face winced at this bad memory and then quickly broke into a smile as he admitted, "Even at the age of 40, the urge is still there and I must avoid motorcycle jump shows, let alone be rekindled and forced out of dormancy."

A Washington C. H. Evel Knievel, you ask? Yes, but his name is Gene Lyons, father of six, who resides at 917 Washington Ave., with his wife, Thelma and family, and is now involved in his own plumbing business; admittedly, a much safer vocation.

HOW DID IT START? What makes a man take chances, putting his precious life on the line?

For Lyons, who was born and raised in Washington C. H., it started quite by accident here, at the age of 15. He had been watching some motorcyclists practicing their jumps, using a safety ramp, in preparation for a show at the fair and he let them know he thought that was "chicken." A hand was placed on his shoulder and before he knew what was happening, he was put on a cycle by one of the men and told, "You think you can do it kid? Then go ahead."

It was his first time on a bike and he did just that - jumped it and made it and the guys left him alone, until a month later when the same man who placed him on that first cycle managed to find him and asked if he'd like to join the show for $60 a week. His 15-year-old eyes glistened and the road swallowed him for five years.

Lyons explained the show which took him all over the nation, some parts of Canada and eventually to Hawaii, employed him during his summers, but there were complications which had to be worked around because he had to leave school early and start late.

"The road show people were good about anything you possibly needed. They provided me with a tutor to make up for lost school time and at the end of high school, I wound up graduating in New York," Lyons explained.

"Ward Beam's policy in the daredevil show was 'once you're married, you're out,' Lyons continued, "so when Thelma and I decided to make the big move, I left the business. It had been good to me, providing me with five exciting years of traveling and meeting people, but I felt it was time to go home."

Lyons quit in one piece, but his original physical make-up had been altered somewhat from the times he missed the landing ramp.

"It would be pretty close to say I've broken everything but my back and my body is etched with scars," Lyons admitted.

It's no wonder. Not only did Lyons cycle-jump for the shows, but he also jumped in cars and rode his Harley Davidson with 45 or 74 cubic centimeter engines through a flaming tunnel, 20 feet long, constructed from chicken wire and paper and hosed with 15 gallons of gasoline which sent towering flames 50 feet into the air. He explained he was burned everytime he did this stunt, but after he quit the show, hair finally grew back on his forearms to stay.

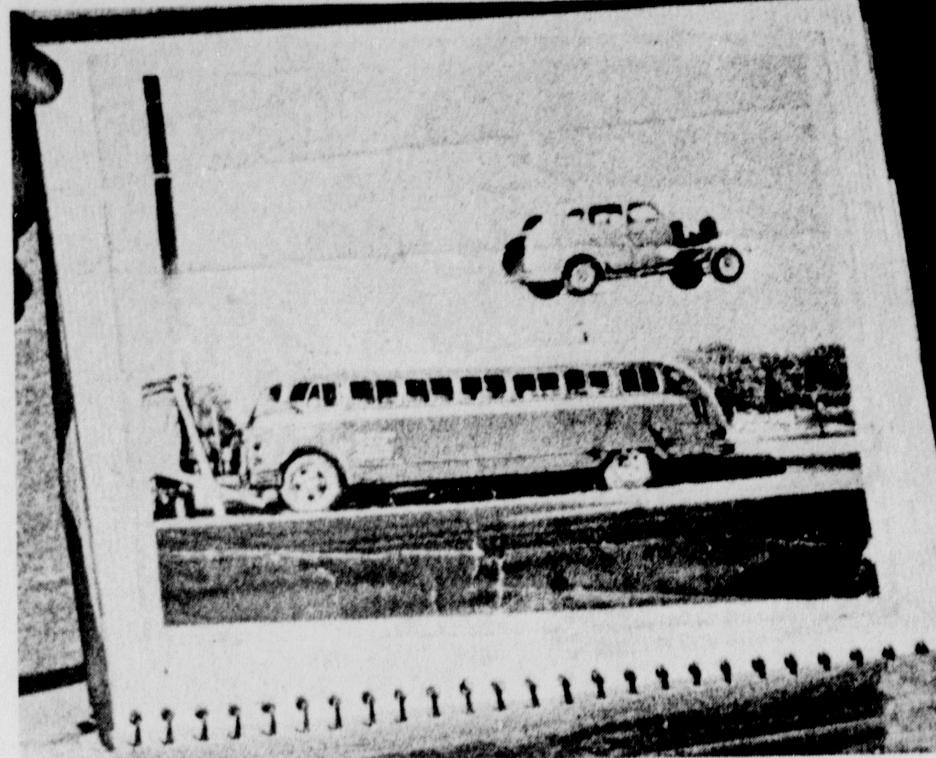

The Harleys used in the show were completely stripped except for their small springless seats and foot rests. The front wheel was without suspension, because as Lyons explained, "If you land right, the suspension on the back wheel takes the impact and the front wheel glides down easily."

He continued with his explanation of jump technique. "After you leave your trajectory ramp, you stand in the saddle and prepare for landing. If the wind is wrong or you have gained or lost weight and this has effected your flight, it's too late to make alterations in mid-air. If you know you're not going to make it, you give the handle bars a shove and get the bike away from you and thus take your chances falling on the ground away from the machine. You usually land on your back and shoulders because you change your body position in the air while shoving the cycle away from you."

Lyons commented he doesn't really understand why today's cycle-jumpers insist on staying with the bike when they know they're not going to make it. "I would never do that and I believe it increases the injury risk!" he exclaimed.

When Lyons departed from the show, not only could he jump other motorcycles, cars, buses and people, but he had mastered a 100 foot ramp-to-ramp jump which was his farthest distance and could also do a pretty good clown act.

"The more risk you took in your act and the more things you could do at the fair (such as the clown act) the more money you made," Lyons stated. "When I quit, I was drawing a $275 per week salary, which basically amounted to a jump per a day or a total of five jumps per week. If another jumper was injured or sick, I was asked to fill in and paid extra, partly because of the tattoo on my right shoulder which verified my AIRBORNE AUTO—Along with ramp-jumping on motorcycles, Gene Lyons also jumped cars as this old photograph from his scrapbook shows. When he finally left "Ward Beam's Auto and Motorcycle Show," after five years of performing, he also had a pretty good clown act worked up. Lyons admits it was quite a life, with never a dull moment.

induction into the 'Stuntman's Association,' which acts like a union and insures you don't get cheated when you take someone else's place in an act."

The tattoo is a picture of a skull which says "Death or Glory" on top and "Ward Beam - 1951" (the year Lyons joined the show), underneath. Lyons stated he never regretted getting the tattoo, except for the fact it itches occasionally and isn't as colorful as it once was.

"I was tattooed right after my shoulder had healed from a fall and I think it was because of the scar tissue, the color faded out," he explained.

When questioned about the fear one has after defeat, Lyons told about a humorous incident.

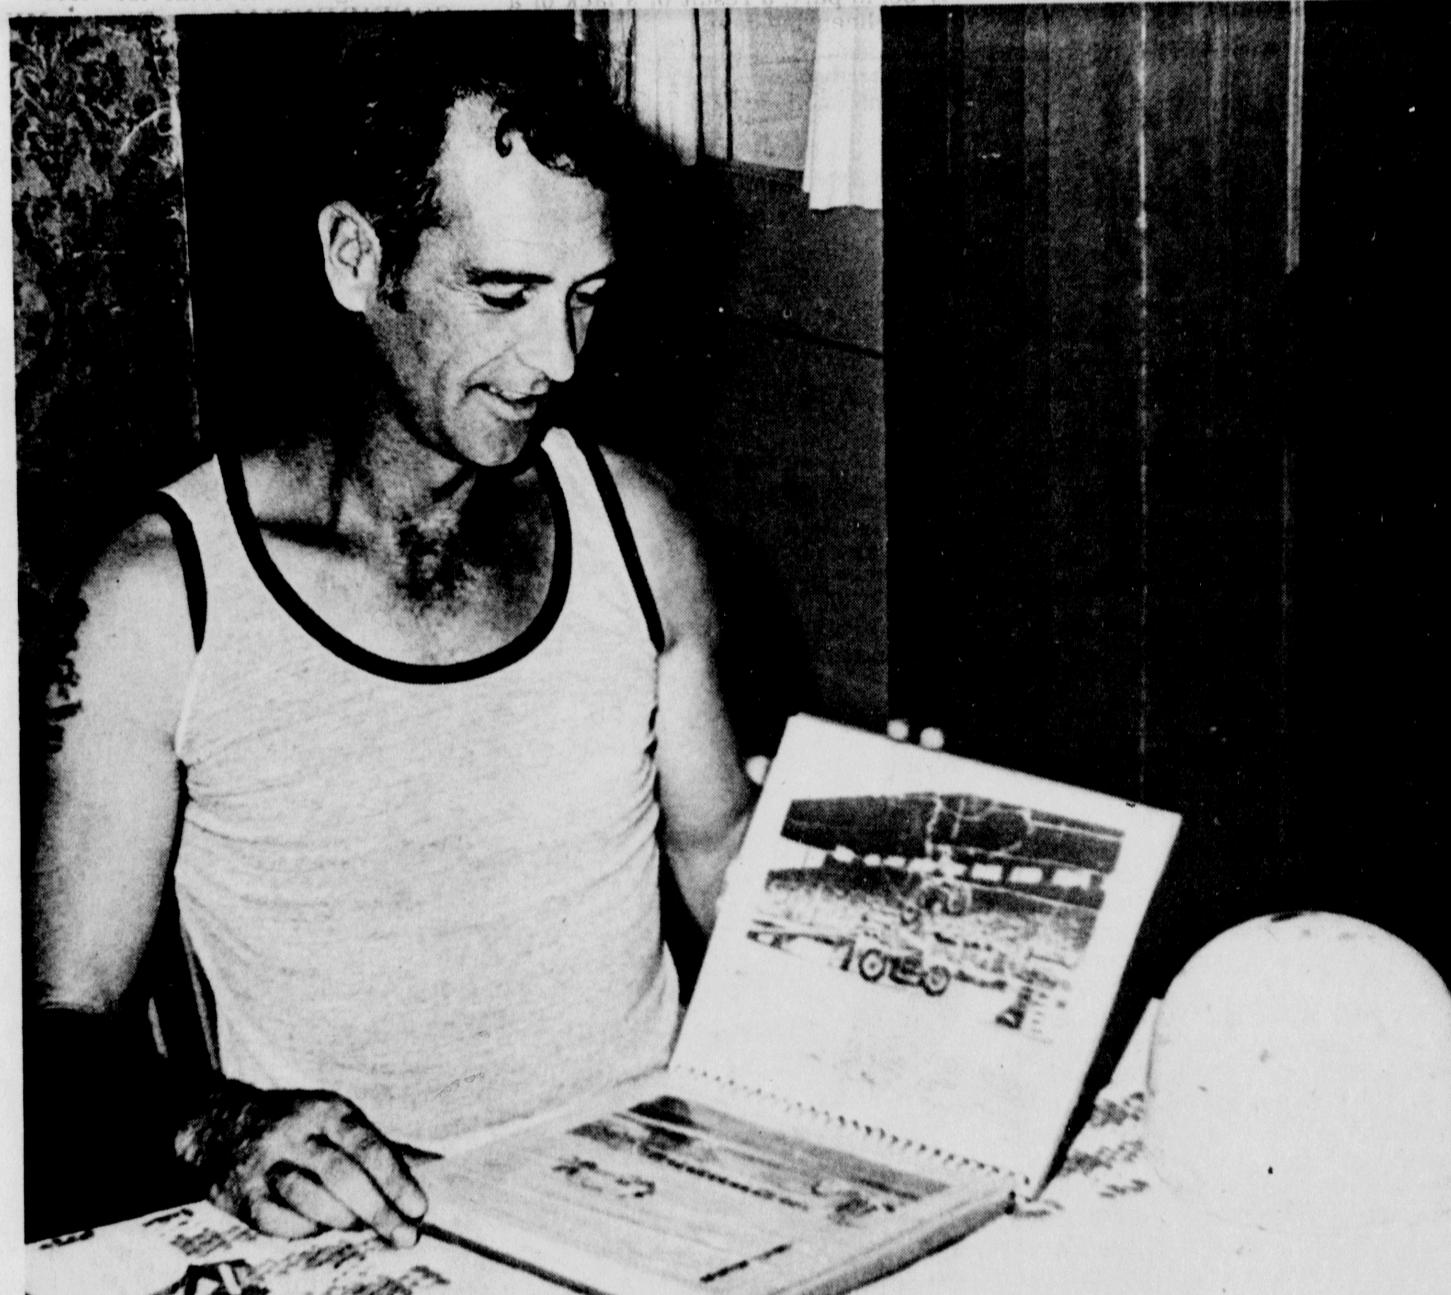

Ward Beam's policy was to get you back on the cycle as soon as possible and make you do it right to make sure you didn't freeze up and even if you were broken and bleeding after a fall, three guys would run over to you, pick you up and bend your body into a bow to the crowd and then rush you to the hospital. I remember a time in northern Indiana, where I wiped out and was put in the hospital. A few days later

I thought I was healed enough to leave and did so, but by the time the show hit Decora, Iowa, I was so swollen, I had to be hospitalized again. During this time, the show went on to Newall, Minn. They never left you really, because they would keep in touch and as soon as you were well, you took a bus to catch up with them. In my case, I got well enough finally to bus it back to Indiana, to the jump I had missed and they put me back on that cycle so fast, I wasn't sure what was happening. I made it and then hopped the bus to catch the show in Minnesota. It was a very trying bus ride. I was still bandaged and had stitches in my mouth and it hurt like crazy to talk, but the bus was loaded with all these young boys who performed in a Drum and Bugle Corp.; and they were really good musicians, but they kept asking me questions - didn't let me rest or stop talking for a minute!" Lyons chuckled.

During Lyons' life as a daredevil showman, he brushed shoulders with many celebrities who got their start on the road too. "Jackie Gleason was the barker at the show for a couple months and I became a close friend of Elvis Presley's uncle, who had joined the show as a hired hand in order to escape his father's restaurant business," Lyons said.

ALTHOUGH Lyons has been in the plumbing business for the past 20 years, he still rides. In fact, the entire family rides, except for his wife, who admitted she was not into par-

First lady tours church

KENSINGTON, Md. (AP) — First Lady Betty Ford toured the new temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints (Mormon) here and described it as "a truly great experience for me."

Mrs. Ford was escorted by church members through the massive white building for a 90-minute tour on Wednesday.

The temple will be dedicated in November and then closed to the public.

The first lady, an Episcopalian, signed the guest book as "Betty B. Ford, The White House, Washington, D.C."

Also touring the temple separately on Wednesday were members of the foreign diplomatic corps, including Soviet Ambassador Anatoly F. Dobrynin.

The present bike in the family is owned by one of Lyons' older sons and is a Honda 125 on-the-road-off-the-road cycle, but his children agreed biking is in their blood stream and there would be many more motorcycles in the family before long.

Lyons ironically admitted although he rides the Honda 125 occasionally (he can do "wheelies" in all gears), he confines himself to the yard and alley nearby, because he doesn't have a motorcycle license.

Lyons concluded his story with some comments about Evel Knievel's escapade last Sunday and the motorcycle's coming of age.

"When you consider Knievel had the best minds in the world working on his sky-cycle and ramp, it should have worked. We'll probably never really know why it didn't. Publicity may have pushed him into something he didn't really want to do and he realized it was impossible to back out. I believe he could have made it and I wonder why he didn't. As for the motorcycle today: it had definitely come of age. There will be more and more of them on the roads and prices will continue to rise. I can't think of a better, cheaper, more fun way to get where you're going, but I pray they start getting the respect they deserve on the roads," Lyons declared.

Tappan shifts production work

MANSFIELD, Ohio (AP) — The Tappan Co. announced Wednesday it is transferring production of all microwave ovens, gas and electric built-in ovens and surface units to its Mansfield plant from a Los Angeles facility it sold recently.

Meanwhile, electric range production will be shifted from Mansfield to the Lawson factory in Springfield, Tenn., the firm said.

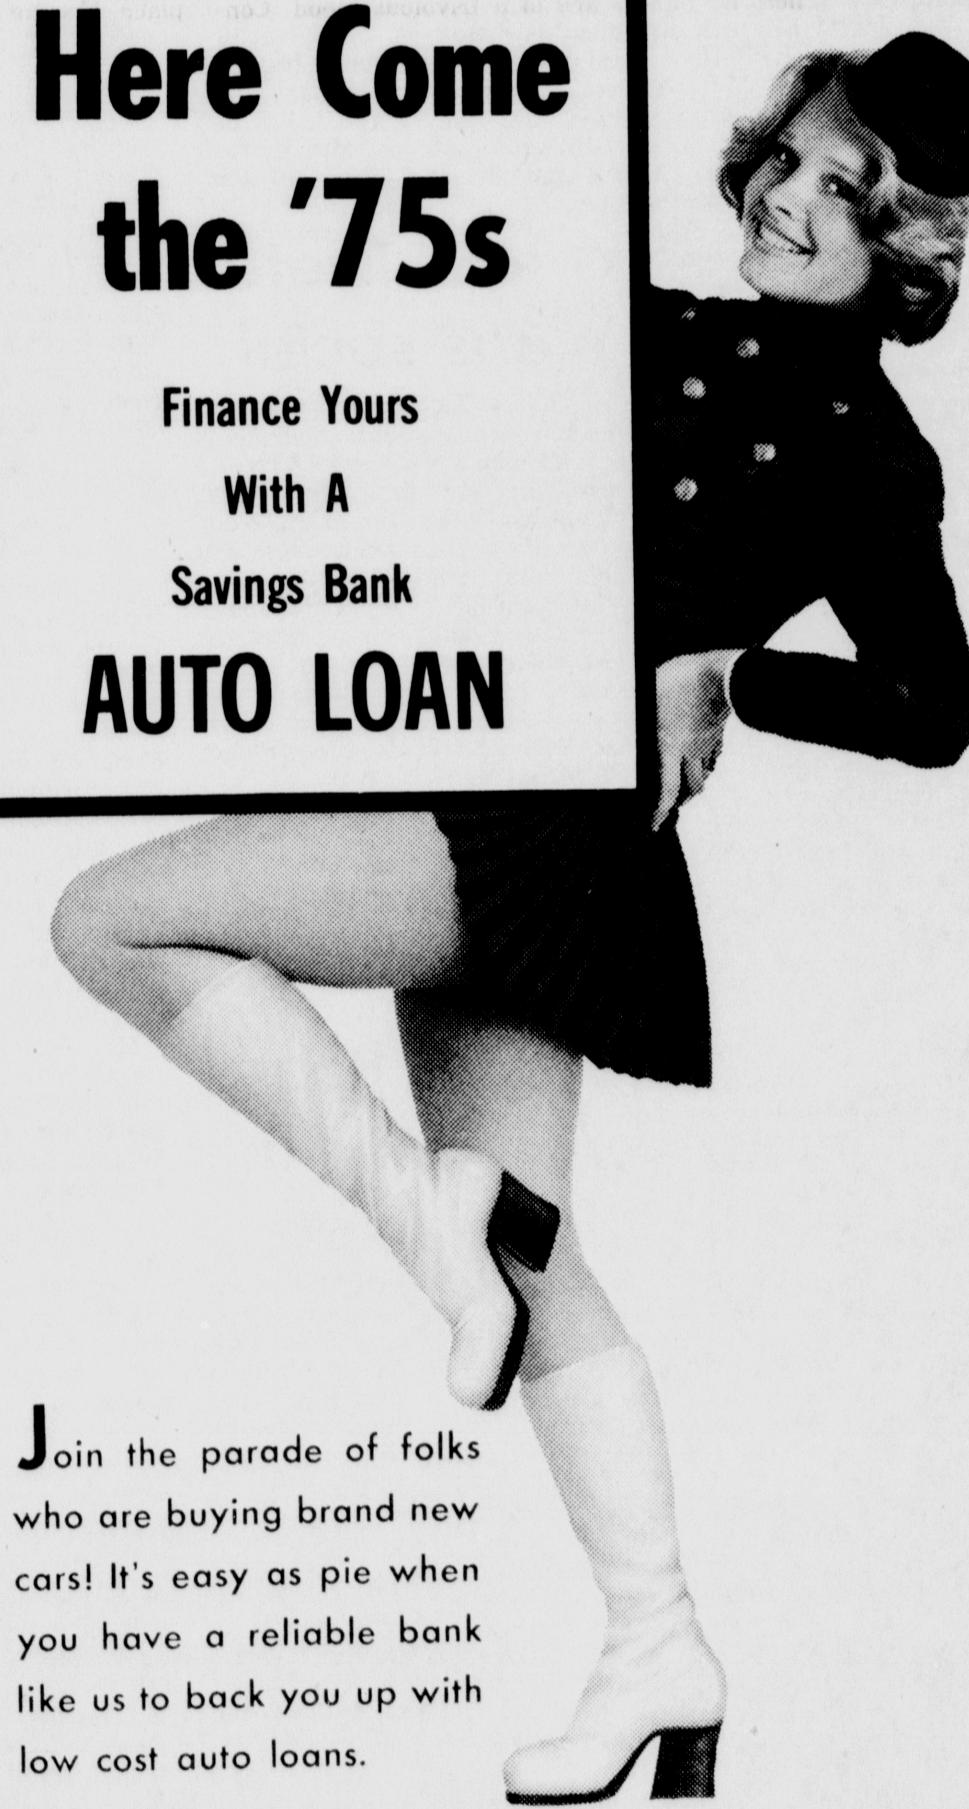

The firm said the moves would save money through more efficient production, lower freight costs and reduced material costs. The company said no changes in the employment here were anticipated in the near future.

Cereus plant attraction

ANNUAL AFFAIR — A night-blooming Cereus plant owned by Mrs. Donna Baughn, 827 Washington Ave., recently produced four perfect blooms. The plant opens only one time each year, and that one time is during the night.

Friends and neighbors recently gathered at the home of Mrs. Donna Baughn, 827 Washington Ave., to view an annual attraction.

The noteworthy event was the blooming of Mrs. Baughn's Cereus plant. The exotic foliage blooms only once each year, and then only at night. Its green combs spread during the night to produce impressive white blooms which close again by morning.

Mrs. Baughn has other unusual plants including Moses in the Bulrushes, crowns of thorn, and a Christmas Cactus.

One local expert projected that the plant will bloom next year on Aug. 23.

Watershed workshop here Sept. 18

The Ohio Department of Natural Resources and the Ohio Federation of Soil and Water Conservation Districts will conduct a watershed planning workshop Sept. 18 at the Fayette County Fairgrounds. The workshop will be preceded by a tour of the Upper Paint Creek and Rattlesnake Creek watershed areas.

The workshop will include presentations by several authorities on watershed planning, a panel discussion and a question and answer session.

REGISTRATION will be from 2:30 until 3 p.m. at the Mahan Building on the Fayette County Fairground.

The first speaker will be Adelle Mitchell, ombudsman for the Ohio Department of Natural Resources and the Ohio Environmental Protection Agency.

A panel discussion on the watershed planning process will follow. Panel members include Gene Abercrombie, director of the Ohio Department of Agriculture; William Mattox, Ohio Department of Natural Resources, office of planning and research; David Kile, assistant state conservationist for watersheds, Ohio Soil Conservation Service, and Dr. Richard A. Tubb, professor of zoology and natural resources, Ohio State University.

The workshop will recess from 5:30 until 7 p.m. for dinner. Speakers for the final segment include John Peterson, chairman of the Fayette County Soil and Water Conservation District; Lew Burnett, secretary of the Chippewa Watershed in Medina County, and Dr. Byron Nolte, Ohio Cooperative Extension Service.

Earlier in the day there will be an optional "drive-it-yourself" tour for workshop participants. The 50-mile tour, to start at 9:30 a.m., will include nine manned stops along the way to examine various aspects of watershed development.

Watershed development is desired by the residents of Upper Paint Creek and Rattlesnake Creek to improve soil drainage and reduce flood damage.

The Upper Paint Creek Watershed includes the southeast edge of Clark County, the southwest corner of Madison County, and a wide belt that runs from north to south across Fayette County. The entire watershed area covers 160,345 acres or 250.5 square miles.

According to Soil Conservation Service tabulations, 78 per cent of the soils are poorly drained and 61 per cent (97,500 acres) will be provided drainage benefits by the proposed project. The land use is 86 per cent cropland, six per cent pasture, four per cent woodland and four per cent miscellaneous.

The watershed includes 121,345 acres in Fayette County, 37,235 in Madison County and 1,765 in Clark County.

The preliminary investigation of the Upper Paint Creek Watershed was completed May, 1969, and the project was approved for planning assistance June, 1969. Since that time the SCS has continued its planning effort, the Ohio Department of Natural Resources completed an environmental review in October, 1971, the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife completed a report in January, 1974, concerning the effect of the proposed project on fish and wildlife resources, and local project sponsors have worked to achieve completion of project plans and their implementation.

Major items in the preliminary SCS report proposal are improved pasture management, improved cropland drainage, reduced flood damage, and channel modification. The drainage affects 80 per cent of the cropland and channel modification affects 86 miles of channel.

The average annual project benefits were estimated to be $428,455. The proposed work was estimated to provide $1.30 in benefits per $1 cost. Annual operation and maintenance costs were estimated at $47,020.

THE OHIO Department of Natural Resources estimates nine species of fish will be eliminated in 86 miles of channel and that population levels of other species will be reduced. The lost fish are estimated to have an annual wholesale value of $17,000. The Fayette County forest acreage loss is estimated at 400 to 500 acres, or about six per cent of the total forest acreage in the county.

The local watershed steering committee began work in 1963. The committee points out that the lack of suitable drainage outlets affects farmers four or five miles from the main streams because they depend on an outlet at that stream to drain their cropland. Agricultural receipts in Fayette County topped $40 million in 1973 and would have been considerably greater with improved drainage.

The Rattlesnake Creek Watershed project application was submitted in March, 1970, after considerable study and work in the county. This year, the Ohio Department of Natural Resources recommended that the SCS provide planning assistance.

The watershed includes 177,409 acres in Greene, Clinton, Fayette, Highland and Madison counties. Land use is 85 per cent cropland, seven per cent pasture, four per cent woodland, and four per cent other uses. Drainage and flooding problems and the impact of likely project proposals are similar to those in Upper Paint Creek.

Included in the Rattlesnake Creek Watershed area are 2,839 acres in Madison County, 58,545 acres in Fayette County, 12,596 acres in Greene County, 40,449 acres in Clinton County and 62,980 acres in Highland County. There are 27,200 total square miles in the watershed area.

The entire Paint Creek basin which includes both Rattlesnake and Upper Paint Creek watersheds, covers 1,144 square miles and has 573 miles of named streams and 167 miles of unnamed streams, according to the Ohio Division of Water. There is no data available listing the mileage of intermittent streams.

An estimate was made in 1972 of the mileage of streams and drainage channels in each Ohio county. The total mileages by county are Clark, 381 miles; Clinton, 711 miles; Fayette, 441 miles; Greene, 595 miles; Madison, 1,850 miles, and Highland, 1,100 miles.

An information booth will be located at a Sohio service station, I-71 and Ohio 38-N. Tour guides will be available at the information booth.

FIRST STOP

East Fork of Paint Creek, Fayette County. Located on Brock Road, one-half mile west of Ohio 38-N.

SECOND STOP

Brock ditch in Paint Township. Located on Haigler Road, one-fourth mile south of Brock Road. The stop will be manned by the watershed steering committee. The ditch was petitioned Sept. 22, 1958 by H.B. Rader, H.W. Looker and Russell N. Garris. It benefits 2,562.76 acres and 32 landowners. The total construction cost was $13,408.50 and an average cost of $5.24 per acre.

En route, participants should observe the poorly-drained field on the left side of Ohio 734 after passing the junction with Hayes Road. Participants are also asked to slow down to note the condition of the East Fork of Paint Creek before turning right on Ohio 38. Observe well-kept farms and notice the well-managed farmland.

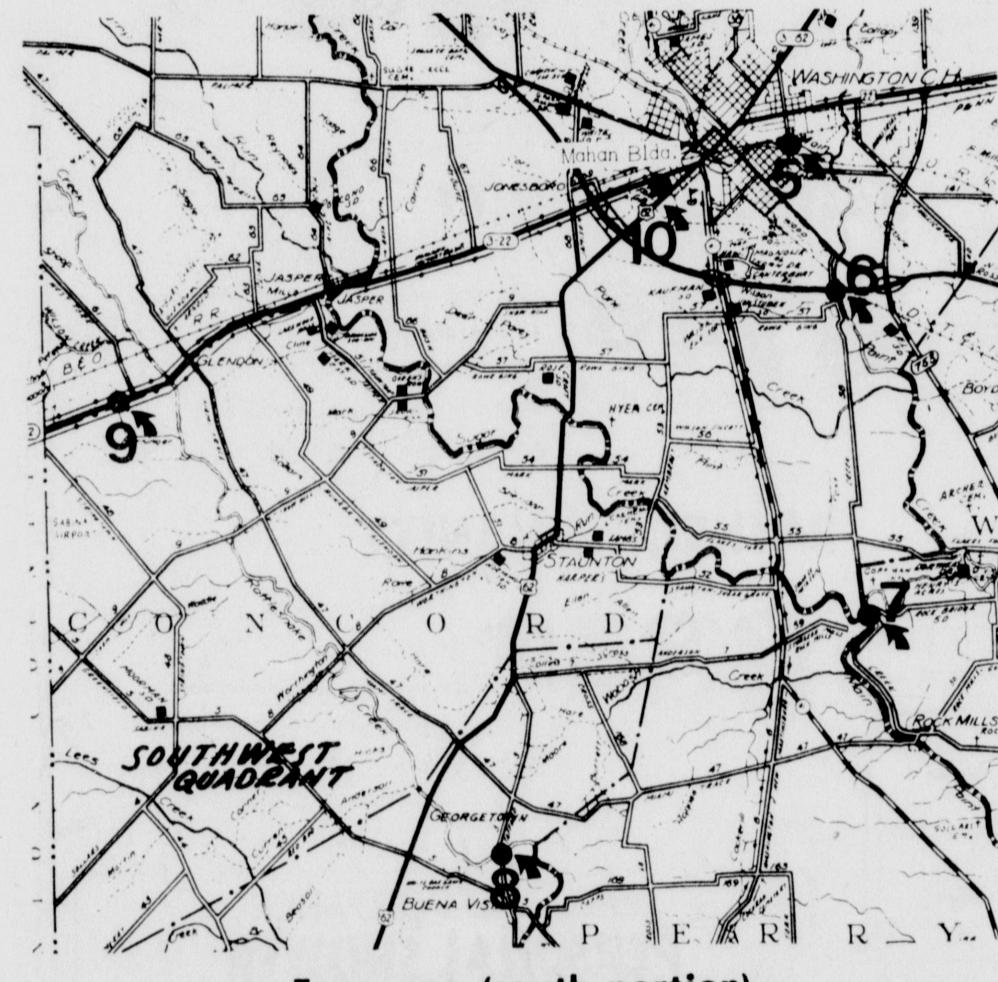

THIRD STOP

East Fork of Paint Creek and Jane's ditch. Located on Ohio 38, one-fourth mile west of Bloomingburg. The stop will be manned by Ralph Strahler, landowner, and SCS personnel. The Jane's ditch is a county-maintained ditch entering the East Fork of Paint Creek from the west. Improvements

FOURTH STOP

New tile outlet, installed by county in 1974. It is located at the intersection of CCC Highway-E and the Washington-Waterloo Road. The stop will be manned by the Fayette County Engineer's office. The tile drains 248 acres and benefits 23 landowners. The tile was installed to supplement the Hartman ditch which had become inadequate to service the watershed. The cost of installation was $22,020.92.

FIFTH STOP

Main Paint Creek, Elm Street bridge in Washington C.H. It will be manned by city officials, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and personnel from the Ohio Department of Natural Resources' division of planning. The city, working through Congressman William H. Harsha, requested the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to plan and develop a flood control system for Paint Creek in Washington C.H. The initial request was made immediately after the 1963 flood which caused over $250,000 in damages within the city alone.

The project was approved July 30, 1965. The work consisted of realignment and enlarging of about 6,000 feet of the channel of Paint Creek and snagging and clearing of about 9,000 feet of the channel and banks of Paint Creek. The project began at the U.S. 35 bridge, south of Washington C.H., and extended upstream to the Temple Street bridge.

The contract totaled $105,602.57. The project involved enlargement, realignment, and snagging and clearing of 14,850 feet of the Paint Creek channel.

SIXTH STOP

Located on Creek Road, beneath the U.S. 35 bypass bridge. The stop will be manned by SCS soil scientist and engineer.

SEVENTH STOP

Creek Road low-water bridge on Paint Creek. Located approximately one and a half miles north of Rock Mills on Rock Bridge Road. It will be manned by the fish section representative from the Ohio Division of Wildlife. The low-water bridge was constructed in the 1930s.

EIGHTH STOP

Rattlesnake Creek in Fayette County. Located on the Fayette County Fish and Game Association grounds on Stafford Road, one-fourth mile south of Miami Trace Road.

NINTH STOP

Persinger ditch and submerged tile outlet. Located on CCC Highway-W, three-fourths mile west of Rattlesnake Creek. The stop will be manned by area farmers. The tile submerged prior to ditch improvements completed in the spring and summer of 1974. Persinger ditch drains approximately 501 acres and was petitioned for enlarged capacity and improvements. The ditch benefits six farmers and they paid the $6,139.18 construction costs.

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — An expected fight at the Ohio Democratic Convention Saturday over more lenient marijuana laws apparently has been averted.

Retail sales across Ohio rise slightly

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio retailers showed a 1 per cent increase in sales in July compared to June, and a 10 per cent rise in dollar volume sales over the year ending in July, an Ohio research group has reported.

The Ohio State Center for Business and Economic Research said the 1 per cent jump in July after a slump the previous month marked a return to a trend of month-to-month increases.

The rise in retail sales over the 12-month period was in keeping with the uphill climb in consumer prices, the researchers said.

July dollar sales increased in 20 of the 25 types of businesses surveyed. The biggest dollar gains were among retail lines which had increases sharply in price.

Included in this category were hay feed and farm-supply stores, with dollar sales up 92 per cent; fuel dealers, up 66 per cent, and gas stations, up 15 per cent.

Also showing substantial sales gains were paint and wallpaper stores, up 23 per cent; florists and general stores carrying food, 18 per cent, and appliance and hardware stores, 17 per cent.

Canton (Stark County) led the state's major urban areas with an over-the-years around his Ohio State University district. Stiniano advocates treating a first offense as a civil disturbance, punishable by a fine.

The legislature, and not his party's state convention, is the place to debate the issue, the Columbus legislator said he decided. He had hoped to draw up a minority plank for inclusion in the report of the 19-member Democratic Platform Committee, which ended deliberations Tuesday night with a unanimous report.

Without minority reports, the convention of some 1,000 Ohio Democrats probably will avoid a platform fight of any substance at their first statewide convention in two years. Another item was expected to produce fireworks, however.

It involves the recommendations of State Party Chairman William A. Lavelle and others for 14 at-large and 19 alternate delegates to a national party mini-convention in Kansas City next December.

Sixty-four regular delegates to the convention were elected by Democrats at the May primary. Lavelle will submit recommendations for the alternate delegates and alternates to the state convention for ratification.

There have been claims by certain minority, economic, and other groups that Lavelle's announced choices are not representative enough, and they reportedly plan to try to change the lineup at the convention.

The issue was placed on the agenda twice, so that it might be considered a second time, giving Lavelle and members of the Delegate Selection Committee a chance in the interim to make other nominations.

The state convention will also consider seven proposed amendments to the state party constitution, and hear a keynote speech by State Rep. Richard F. Celeste, D-5 Cleveland, the party's nominee for lieutenant governor.

Mother donates man's kidneys after suicide

MIAMI (AP) — The mother of Thomas Roberts, who fatally shot himself because he could not afford to bury his wife, has donated his kidneys so that someone else may live.

Janet Exner of Cleveland, Ohio, said she made the decision after being told Tuesday that her 53-year-old son was about to die.

"I've donated his kidneys for someone," Mrs. Exner said.

Police found Roberts at his home Monday dying of a gunshot wound.

Market speculation proves tough

NEW YORK (AP) — It's really tough to make a speculative buck in the marketplace.

That wisdom, which invariably is developed after the fact, has been the lament of broken speculators ever since man developed trade, but it has become a dirge sung by a million-voice choir in the past decade.

The wail of the goldbug is now heard in the land, the latest victim of that diabolical tendency of the market to collapse without warning. Who said gold doesn't deteriorate? Owners of gold stocks will claim otherwise.

Long promoted as the only investment vehicle that could withstand the malaise of world economies, gold stocks this week turned out to be no different than others. They plunged, some as much as 20 per cent in one day, Monday.

Homestake Mining shrank $10.25 to $45. Campbell Red Lake fell $8.50 to $30.12. ASA Ltd. lost $10.37 to $79.25. Dome Mines declined $8.25 to $47.12. And International Mining declined $2 to $9.50. All were heavily traded.

Why such devastation occurred isn't entirely clear. An advisory service did send a bearish report to customers, claiming that possible tax increases and inflation were fouling the gold investment climate. But there was more to it than that.

As in almost every fad or mass craze, there is a beginning and an end. Whether or not this is the end of the gold stock boom cannot be forecast, but what obviously happened is that many stockholders declared it was the end for them.

That is the way the end always begins. It has happened in commodities of almost all kinds, in "glamor" stocks, in mutual fund shares. And it probably will occur sometime in the government securities market, where thousands now seek refuge.

In the beginning of a fad a few people claiming to be in the know lead the way. Other insiders and a few outsiders join. The word goes round and the mass of people jump aboard. The newest fad has thus matured.

At this point the first ones in are eager to be the first out. They've made their money and they're ready to depart, which they do. Those remaining are forced to assess their position realistically rather than romantically. They do, and they sell.

The very largest mass movement of this sort occurred in the 1967-1968 bull market, when millions of Americans plunged into the stock market, many for the first time. During the 1960s the number of shareholders doubled to 30 million.

This was, of course, the signal for earlier investors to clear out. Ever since then the stock market has been in a recession.

The losses made financial conservatives out of millions of people. It convinced them, as it was so often put, "to get back to the basics," to measure real rather than imagined value.

And that, ironically, is why so many people bought gold stocks.

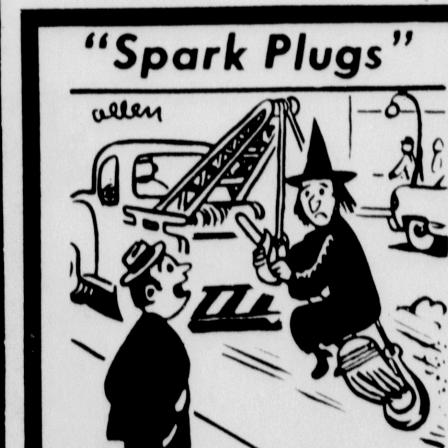

Refund ordered of PERS funds

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Public Employees Retirement System must refund increased collections taken during a six-month period in 1973 from nonstate employee contributors, a state appeals court has ruled.

The 10th Ohio District Court of Appeals upheld a Franklin County Commons Pleas Court ruling that .4 per cent of the salary collected only from nonstate workers between Jan. 1 and June 30 was an unfair assessment.

The nonstate employee members of the retirement system sought the refund after a similar refund was provided to state employees.

Report shows state aid here increased notably since '71

State-sponsored assistance to Fayette County residents, notably support of public education, has increased dramatically since 1971, according to Ohio Gov. John J. Gilligan.

Programs in effect since 1971 reflect the priorities of the Gilligan administration.

BENEFITS to Fayette County in 1974 were $947,000 more than in 1971, according to report issued by Gilligan. This includes $792,000 in new state aid to Fayette County's two school districts and $155,000 for health care, public assistance and other human services programs.

In addition, in 1974 Fayette County residents will receive property tax relief of approximately $304.00 — nearly $47,000 through the homestead exemption for elderly citizens and $257,000 through the 10 per cent property tax rollback.

According to the report, the net income tax increase for the "typical" Fayette County family of five (with three children) for this increased state aid in 1974 amounts to $12 on the year, or 23 cents a week.

The report disclosed the source of the data is from the Ohio Department of Taxation and is based on county-wide averages. The average income of a Fayette County family of five is $7,891 and the average home market value is $15,000.

The increased state support, 1974 compared to 1971, is the equivalent of 7.4 mills in property tax collections in Fayette County on the average. The dollar value of 7.4 mills in property taxes to the average Fayette County homeowner is $39.

In other words, the report said, the education program now provided by Fayette County's two school districts in 1974 as compared to 1971 would have cost the average family $39 more in new property taxes (instead of the net $12 increase in state taxes) had it not been for increased state support.

The report pointed out increased state support for Fayette County schools is made possible mainly through the taxes levied on personal and corporate incomes.

In fiscal year 1971, the county's schools received $1,082,429 in state aid to education. In fiscal year 1974, they received $1,874,511 an increase of $792,082 or 73 per cent. The additional money made possible an average increase of $122 per pupil in the county.

A BREAKDOWN of figures discloses the Washington C.H. school district received $600,251 in state aid in fiscal year 1971. In fiscal year 1974, Washington C.H. schools received $860,288 — an increase of $260,037 or 43 per cent. The increase meant an additional $98 per pupil and a savings of 7.2 mills, the report pointed out.

The Miami Trace school district received $482,178 in state aid in fiscal year 1971. By fiscal year 1974, the aid had increased $532,045 to $1,014,223. This is a jump of 110 per cent, according to the report. It meant an additional $138 per pupil. The report stated if this increase had not come from state income tax revenues, local residents would have had to pass property tax increases of 7.5 mills to match it.

City Council honors Eagle Scouts

Five Washington C.H. area youngsters, who achieved the coveted Eagle Scout rank recently, were honored by members of Washington C.H. City Council during Wednesday night's meeting in the City Office Building.

Receiving special praise for their distinctive achievements were Timothy J. Breitigan, Michael G. Hughes, James O. Knisley, Jeffrey M. Overly and John B. Rhoads.

All five youngsters are members of Boy Scout Troop No. 229 at the Grace United Methodist Church in Washington C.H.

SPECIAL accolades were given to the five new Eagle Scouts by City Council chairman John E. Rhoads and Council member Joseph O'Brien.

Rhoads, O'Brien and Council member Donald E. Wood have devoted a number of years to scouting in the Washington C.H. area.

O'Brien serves as assistant scoutmaster for Troop No. 229. Scoutmaster Paul Breitigan was unable to attend Wednesday night's City Council meeting since he is on a business trip in Tulsa, Okla. O'Brien pointed out that besides the Eagle Scout rank presented to the youngsters

Council chairman raps radio editorial

Washington C. H. City Council chairman John E. Rhoads Wednesday night publicly criticized a local radio announcer for airing an editorial opinion regarding the controversial parking meter fine increase which was approved by the city legislators at the last regular meeting.

Rhoads' remarks which sparked a lengthy discussion on the subject by other Council members came during the regular semi-monthly meeting held Wednesday night.

THE CITY Council chairman said he "was shocked" by the broadcasting of the editorial which was aired over WCHO Radio here Aug. 29 and also noted that the editorial appeared in the Fayette Advertiser.

Rhoads asked Robert Lutz, author of the editorial to read it aloud during Wednesday night's meeting, but when the radio broadcaster refused the article was recited by City Manager Dan Wolford.

The radio editorial said in part "no attempt was made by Council to offer any explanation of the fine increase."

Downtown merchants had opposed the controversial legislation basically because of the 100 per cent increase from the former fine of 50 cents for the first 24 hours to the new $1 penalty.

Council member Donald E. Wood agreed with Rhoads and said he "was surprised by the inuendos" in the editorial.

The editorial also said that the number of merchants attending the last

Council meeting was a reflection of the dissatisfaction by the downtown businessmen.

However, Wood said he had learned that some of the downtown merchants attended the meeting in an attempt "to protect themselves." He said three merchants told him (Wood) that they were present to insure what was said by the spokesmen did not implicate them.

A point in the editorial which stated that Council quickly approved the measure was also disputed by some of the city legislators.

Wood said Council members requested comments from other merchants in attendance at the last meeting and Councilman Hugh S. (Bud) Patton pointed out that Washington C. H. residents had the opportunity to express their opinions on the matter since the legislation was approved after three readings and not as an emergency ordinance.

Lutz said he did not attempt to imply that a hasty decision was made, but rather felt there was a lack of acknowledgement to those in attendance.

"I VOTED my convictions after investigating the matter thoroughly," said Council member Mrs. Bertha McCullough. Mrs. McCullough said she worked four weeks before arriving at her decision and made a number of telephone calls to area police chiefs, service departments and mayors. "I stand behind my decision," she said.

"If the radio station, newspaper and television would spend as much energy in promoting what they've got, instead of trying to find fault with something, we'd all be a lot better off," said Councilman Billie Wilson.

Lutz pointed out that he did not attempt to malign anyone by the editorial comments and that it was "only my opinion."

Council members also approved one piece of legislation, approved the purchase of salt for the winter months, heard a number of safety committee suggestions and authorized the purchase of new fire hose during the meeting.

AN EMERGENCY resolution was adopted by Council accepting the amounts and rates as authorized by the Fayette County budget commission and certified the 1975 budget.

THE CITY manager was authorized to purchase salt for city streets at a total cost of $1,711.47 from Domtar Chemical, Inc. The price is $13.15 per ton and Wolford said a substantial price hike can be expected later this year.

The price offered by the Washington C. H.-based firm was $2.30 per foot which included a five-cent per foot charge for couplings. The Triple A Fire Protection Co., of Dayton, submitted a quote of $2.20 per foot.

Some of the discarded fire hose now being stored in the fire department will be given to the city street department for the operation of street machinery.

WOLFORD also announced a new format for Council work sessions and special meetings. Council will hold 10 work sessions, some in various city school buildings, before the Nov. 5 election. Items to be discussed include the proposed city income tax and the city sewage treatment plant. Council will not meet as regularly scheduled Oct. 9 since some of the Council members and Wolford will be attending a municipal league meeting.

Nine new building permits issued here

Nine new building permits have already been issued this month at the City Office Building by city inspector Glenn Tatman.

Topping the new building permits, Tatman said is a permit which was issued to Alvin Dorn, Rt. 5, Washington C.H. to construct a two-family dwelling on lots 303 and 304 in the Washington Improvement Co. Addition on Gibbs Avenue.

The two-family frame structure, containing 11,904 cubic feet, will have six rooms and two baths. The City Zoning Board of Appeals authorized the construction at its July 17 meeting.

Other building permits issued were: Larry Loyd, 225 N. Hinde St., room addition at rear of residence, $3,000; Mark Schaeper, 734 Fairway Drive, new residence with garage at 628 Damon Drive, $27,000;

Dr. Shaw guest speaker at regional cancer meet

Nine volunteer workers of the Fayette County unit of the American Cancer Society attended a regional meeting of the American Cancer Society this week at the Holiday Inn in Chillicothe.

Those attending were Mrs. Charline Cunningham, unit president; Dr. Byers W. Shaw, delegate and guest speaker; Mrs. Eleanor Henry, alternate delegate; Mrs. Wanda Taylor and Robert E. Marshall, public information committee members; Tom Mark, 1974 Fayette County crusade chairman; Mrs. Donna Jean Johnson, unit treasurer; Mrs. Sally Antoine, board member, and Mrs. Charlene Barber, unit executive director.

Dr. Shaw, a Washington C.H. surgeon who has been active in national, state and local cancer control programs for a number of years, spoke of colon and rectal cancer.

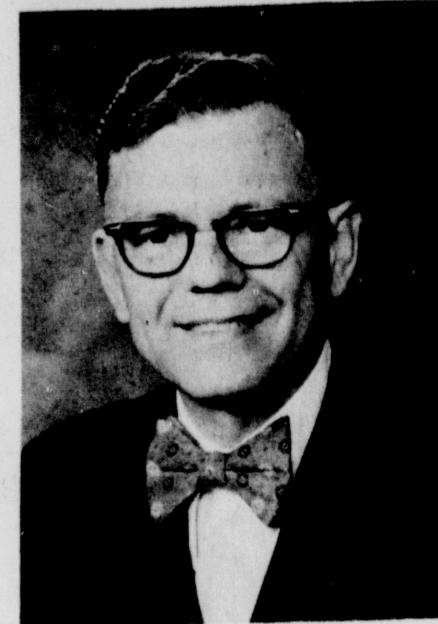

In 1974, Dr. Shaw said, "almost 100,000 Americans will develop cancer of the colon and rectum and about 48,000 will die of the disease." Using presently available methods of treatment of cancer, Dr. Shaw said, "higher cure rates will result only from earlier detection, while these tumors are confined to the site of origin."

Dr. Shaw reported the results of the survey conducted in Fayette County in April, which was a joint effort of the Fayette County Medical Society and the Fayette County unit of the American Cancer Society. He pointed out that careful planning and organization resulted in efficient, confusion-free testing of 418 patients in a four-hour period.

He said the aim of the study was twofold; one to educate the public about the disease, its symptoms and methods of earlier detection, and the actual physical and laboratory examinations to conduct the screening test.

Only those over 40 years of age were encouraged to register for the test. Personnel involved in assisting during the afternoon session included eight nurses, seven physicians, three receptionists, two typists, four interviewers, two hostesses and four lab technicians.

Of the 418 patients examined on the day of the test, 241 were women and there were 177 men. The age range was 30-84 with the average age being 56. Of

The 400 who returned their specimen slides, 140 (35 per cent) were classified as positive — needing further study. The patient's personal physician was notified and further tests were conducted.

The overall result was that 10 patients were found to have a lesion," Dr. Shaw noted. "They included one duodenal ulcer; six benign rectal polyps; one benign villous adenoma; and two adenocarcinoma in rectal polyps. Of greatest significance is the fact that two patients were found early treatable tumors," he said.

"The project was considered extremely worthwhile and is expected to be repeated," Dr. Shaw said.

During the business meeting, Dr. William A. Myers, a Circleville physician, was elected as the district 10 representative on the Ohio board of trustees; and Robert E. Mathews, of Columbus, was re-elected as a lay member on the board. He is presently serving as vice chairman of the Ohio division board.

A gold nugget was found in Dawson City, Yukon, that weighed 72 ounces and 8.5 grains. It was nearly six inches long and was 2 1/4 inches wide at the heavy end and 1 1/4 inches at the smaller end. At $16 an ounce it was valued at $1,158 in 1898.

Can nation's future be financed?

By JOHN CUNNIF

AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans aren't saving enough to finance the nation's future and the consequences could be absolutely appalling, "literally incalculable," according to the findings of a study just released.

It could lead to further urban congestion and decay, say the researchers who put the study together. It could mean failures of small-and medium-size businesses, the encouragement of industrial oligarchy, and more power shortages.

The dismal tale gets grimmer. It could very well mean that ecological and environmental programs will be aborted for lack of funds. It could mean high unemployment. It might mean chronically depressed stock prices.

Army has enlistment bonuses

The U.S. Army is presently offering bonuses of $2,500 or $1,500 to young men and women who enlist for selected job specialties, according to the area Army representative Sgt. William Bradshaw.

Complete information on the jobs included in the "cash bonus option" can be obtained at the Army recruiting station, 116 E. Main St., Circleville, Bradshaw said.

Presently, some 25 specialties are included under the option. A bonus of $2,500 accompanies the awarding of such jobs as construction machinery operator, missile crewman, missile repairman, electronic repairman and electrical instrument repairman.

The $1,500 bonus goes to volunteers who earn the job title of radio teletype operator, map draftsman, radar crewman, radar mechanic, radio mechanic, electronic technician, telephone repairman, tank mechanic, electrical plant operator, inventory clerk, communications specialist and others.

Applications must be high school graduates or have a certified high school equivalency diploma. Each young man or woman must also score well in aptitude tests and must pass a physical examination.

In addition, each specialty has certain requirements which the appliant must meet or exceed. Some jobs are open to qualified male applicants only.

To earn the bonus, the individual must enlist for a four-year period. The bonus will be paid after basic and advanced training is successfully completed. The training period is usually about 16 weeks.

economists and researchers at the exchange:

Sources of funds: business savings, $2,923 trillion, personal savings, $1,109 trillion, for a total capital resource of $4,032 trillion.

Uses of funds: gross private domestic investment, consisting mainly of spending for industrial plant and equipment, and residential construction, $4,503 trillion; federal deficit financing, $42 billion; state and local government financing, $30 billion; federal credit agency borrowing, $103 billion.

A quick calculation shows a need for $4,678 trillion of capital and a likely availability, under present attitudes and laws, of only $4,032 trillion, or a shortage of $646 billion. And that's conservative, the exchange maintains.

The detailed report, which was the basis of a speech Needham prepared Monday for the Economic Club of Detroit, is the big gun in an exchange offensive to defeat the capital shortage problem.

As Needham said in his prepared remarks, "We have become literally obsessed by the need for identifying the scope and implications of this problem before it becomes too late to do anything about it."

Preparing for Saturday's flag dedication

Flag dedication set Saturday at airport

The Fayette County Airport will dedicate a flag which has flown over the U.S. Capitol building during special ceremonies at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Following the dedication, area pilots will participate in bomb dropping and spot landing competitions. A cookout is scheduled to begin at 6 p.m.

Numerous area residents and organizations have been involved in obtaining the flag and materials to set the pole.

Cement for the base and the flagpole were purchased by the Fayette County Board of Commissioners. Brick for the foundation was donated by the Basic Construction Co., and weatherproofing was supplied by Fairley Hardware. The flag itself was obtained through the efforts of Congressman William H. Harsha.

Members of the Fayette County Pilots Association and other interested persons have provided labor for the construction of the base and the erection of the pole.

SPEAKING at the dedication will be Robert Minshall, of Washington C.H. Planning to attend and participate are the county commissioners, the Miami Trace High School band, many members of the American Legion, and candidates for the Ohio House of Representatives Lawrence (Bucky) Duford and Robert McEwen.

All area residents are invited to attend and are asked to bring their own meat, tableware and side dish for the cookout. Anyone who can is asked to bring folding chairs.

John Woodmansee, airport manager, said that he is pleased to see the interest which has been generated concerning the flag dedication. "Too

Symbols used to reach shy youth

KENT, Ohio (AP)—Nancy Blair, a doctoral student at Kent State University, says she has had some success using a set of symbol cards to communicate with a severely withdrawn, 14-year-old boy.

Because of her success with the one youth over the past year Miss Blair has received a federal grant to continue her studies, testing her theories with four other autistic children.

Autistic children appear to be normal except that they do not develop speech and don't respond to things around them. No cause has been identified, Kent State says.

The school says the development of symbol cards is a potential bright note on the recovery chances of such children, whose behavior is described as bizarre and often self-destructive.

Miss Blair uses symbol cards for such things as riding, walking and eating. She says the boy learned the symbols quickly and used them to control his activities.

Election fight has national political look

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The continuing battle in Ohio's 1st Congressional District race resumed its national flavor today with the presidential pardon of former President Nixon now an issue and the appearance of U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

Former Mayor Willis D. Gradison Jr., a Republican who lost in a special election last spring in the spectre of Watergate, said he hopes to prevent the pardon from doing the same thing.

Sen. Kennedy is to speak at a fund raiser tonight for U.S. Rep. Thomas Luken, D-Ohio. Luken is only the third Democrat to hold the office from the heavily-Republican district in this century.

The spring election drew national attention as one of six special congressional elections amid the Watergate investigation.

Both sides brought in nationally-known figures during the campaign, including U.S. Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and the then Vice President Gerald R. Ford.

Both Gradison and Luken sought the seat vacated by U.S. Rep. William Keating, R-Ohio, who resigned to become president of The Cincinnati Enquirer.

Gradison, who will attend a White House dinner tonight, told a news conference Wednesday that President Ford acted "hastily and prematurely" in granting Nixon a full pardon.

Gradison said it would be "dead wrong" now for Mr. Ford to even consider pardoning all the persons involved in the Watergate scandal.

He said Ford should have waited until a full disclosure of Nixon's involvement in Watergate was made public before granting the pardon.

But Gradison did not disagree with the pardon.

LCI inmates speak on pardon

By ANDY LIPPMAN
Associated Press Writer

LEBANON, Ohio (AP) — John Johnson thinks President Nixon may have suffered enough to deserve a pardon.

And no group of people thinks more about pardons than prison inmates like Johnson, who is serving time in the Lebanon Correctional Institution.

"I think maybe the humiliation will be punishment enough," said Johnson. "I think he's going through a lot of mental suffering from what he has been through."

"Because he's so well-known, he's going to be confronted by millions of people for the rest of his life who know what he's done."

"When we walk out of here," Johnson said, "only a few of us are going to be recognized for what we did wrong."

But not all of Johnson's fellow inmates share his views.

Johnson was one of four inmates—all serving time on burglary and breaking and entering charges—who was interviewed Wednesday about their views on pardons and Watergate.

Watergate has become a topic of everyday conversation at the medium-security prison here. Many of the prisoners talk about it and the topic is included in the prison's school program.

What bothered the four prisoners interviewed most was the pardoning of the former president.

"If I commit a crime, I get a 5-to-30," said Walter Krancke of Cincinnati. "But Nixon commits a crime and gets $60,000 a year."

"And with his crime, he's hurting people all over the world."

"That's right," added Anthony McClain. "We're supposedly paying back society by being in prison. It looks like society is now paying back Nixon."

All of those interviewed said that if Nixon is pardoned, then everyone who had been jailed because of Watergate should go free.

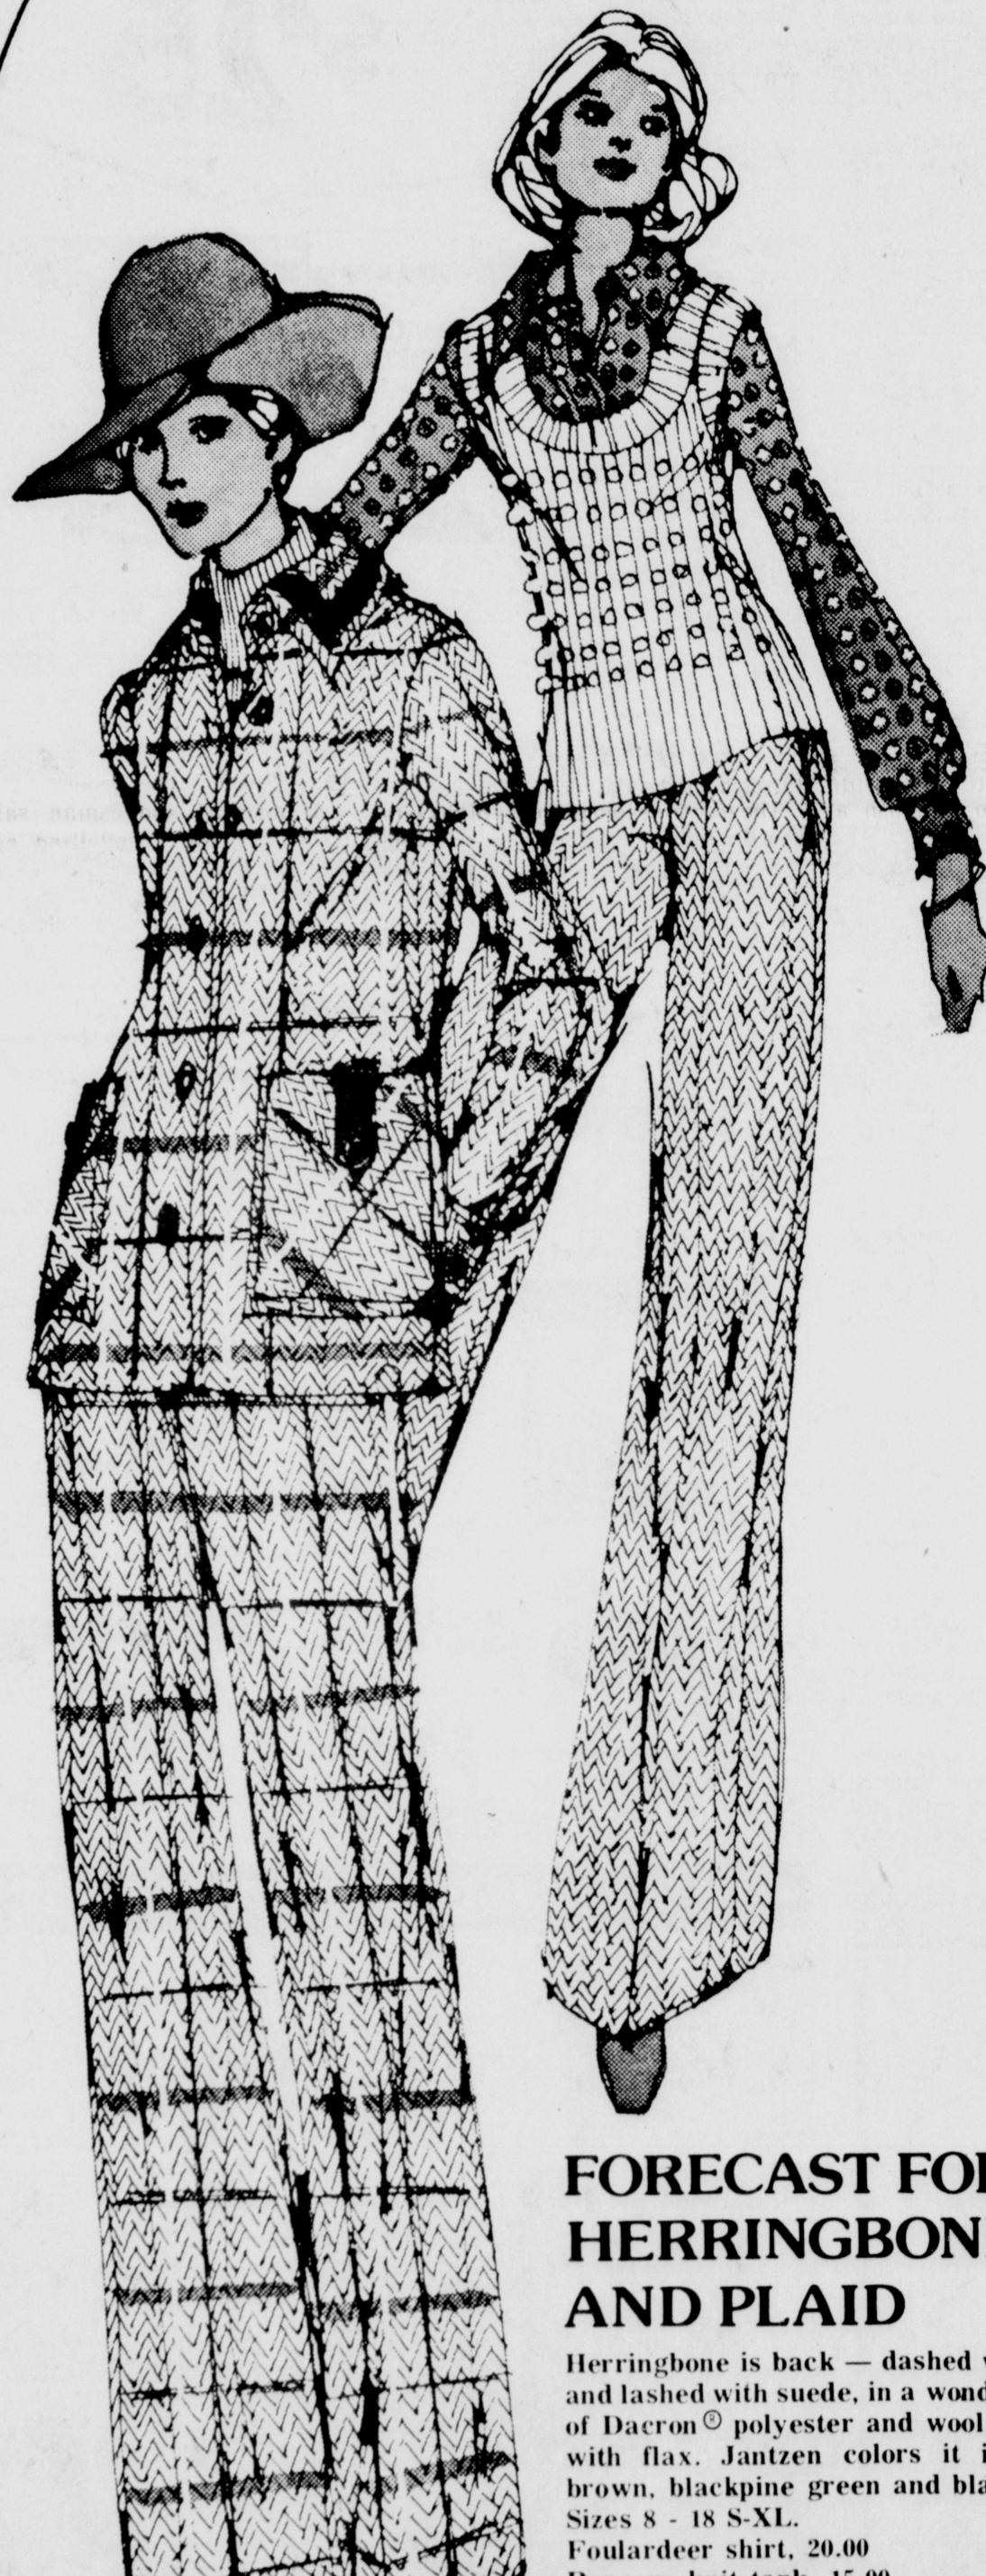

All the inmates had stories of how some people had escaped prison terms while others were given stiff sentences.

"It's not what you are but who you are that often counts most," said McClain.

Arabs planning world investments

By SHIRLEY CHRISTIAN

Associated Press Writer

The petroleum exporting countries are doing out money as carefully as they did oil during the embargo, but there are signs the United States won't get out off this time.

The oil exporting nations made billions of dollars from the four-fold increase in petroleum prices and, in most cases, their economies can absorb but a fraction of the earnings. Most are holding on to surplus revenues, putting it in a safe and ready sugar bowl: short-term bank deposits of no more than 90 days.

But some money is going to help the less developed nations and to purchase arms. Small amounts are being spent on real estate and business investments.

The United States government and American businessmen have been seeking a share of the oil money. Last weekend, there was an indication of partial success: financial sources said that Saudi Arabia had decided to purchase several billion dollars of a special bond issue by the U.S. Treasury.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon visited the Mideast this summer, trying to convince Saudi Arabia and Kuwait to buy a large quantity of the special treasury bonds. He proposed that Saudi Arabia buy "well in excess of $5 billion."

The exact amount and terms of the Saudi Arabian purchase have not been decided on, but a Saudi financial official said the figure would be less than $5 billion.

In addition to the special bond deal, Treasury officials say that oil producing countries have bought the bulk of between $4 billion and $5 billion worth of other Treasury and government securities sold to foreign countries this year.

By the end of this year, the 10 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are expected to have $60 billion more than they need. The World Bank calculated that the surplus would grow to more than a trillion dollars by 1985. That's almost 10 times the amount the United States has invested abroad.

The non-Arab countries — Iran, Venezuela, Indonesia and Nigeria — have larger populations or more sophisticated economies which can soak up most of their money. Even those countries will have excess cash for temporary investments while they wait for projects to come off the drawing boards.

Where is oil money going? Bankers, realtors and others in the financial community are reluctant to talk for attribution. They say they are afraid that pending deals could fall through and possible future transactions might be jeopardized. Some pieces can be put together. Among them:

An offer from Kuwait to pay almost $250 million for the St. Martin's Property Corp., a British real estate group. Kuwait already owns 8 per cent of the company.

An half-interest by the Kuwait Investment Co. in a $100 million Atlanta hotel-commercial complex.

The purchase by the Kuwait Investment Co. of Kiawah Island off the South Carolina coast for $17.4 million.

An offer from Iran to loan money to Grumman Corp. to assure production of the F14 Navy fighter plane.

The purchase by Iran of $3.5 billion worth of U.S. military equipment and $4 billion worth of French industrial goods.

The purchase by Iran of 25 per cent of the steel subsidiary of West Germany's Krupp industrial enterprise for $100 million.

London bankers said that large amounts of oil money in short-term bank deposits had been withdrawn from Great Britain and shifted to New York because of the weak British economy. They declined to give figures.

New York financial experts also refused to provide many specifics. But the New York Federal Reserve Bank, which compiles figures on the holdings of the 12 largest New York banks, said the oil countries were responsible for a recent $300 million increase in the time deposits that the banks hold for foreign nations.

Time deposits are accounts that must stay in the bank for a specified period. The Federal Reserve refused to release the total amount held by the oil countries.

In the private sector, banks, utilities, corporations and real estate developers are on the lookout for oil money.

Almost all the financiers and real estate experts interviewed predicted that most of the surplus oil money will end up in the United States, Europe, Canada, Japan and Australia.

One source, who declined to be identified by name, predicted that Saudi Arabia — the country that will have the most money to spend — will put half its surplus in the United States.

More looting seen in Mozambique fought the Portuguese army to a standstill.

Blacks celebrating the end of the rebellion went on a spree of looting and violence in the ramshackle slums on three sides of the city. The chief target of the looters were small shops owned by Portuguese and Asians.

A hospital spokesman said 171 wounded were hospitalized and 200 more were treated and released. Many refused to leave the hospital because they were afraid, the spokesman said.

The hospital said most of the injuries were inflicted by knives, stones or machetes, but there were also several shotgun wounds.

The downtown business section escaped most of the violence but was virtually deserted on Wednesday as the whites took refuge in their homes and hotels.

Offices, shops, restaurants and banks were closed despite appeals by the military authorities to reopen. The airport was closed to civilian traffic. Only a few cars were on the streets.

The white rebels scattered after their movement foundered, but officials said many were arrested.

Authorities at Miguel Bombarda Hospital, where most civilian casualties were taken, said 21 persons died at the hospital and the bodies of 29 others had been brought in since Tuesday. All but nine of the dead were blacks, he said.

There were unconfirmed reports that as many as 200 were killed Tuesday after the collapse of a white settlers' rebellion against the Portuguese government's agreement to give control of the government to Frelimo, the black guerrilla movement that has been reported in the slums of Lourenco Marques, but reinforced Portuguese troops appeared to be getting control of Mozambique's seaside capital.

Hundreds of soldiers were flown from central and northern Mozambique throughout the day on Wednesday.

The troops sealed off parts of the city shortly before midnight as sporadic looting broke out again in the African quarters. But military authorities said the situation was calmer than on Tuesday night.

The downtown business section escaped most of the violence but was virtually deserted on Wednesday as the whites took refuge in their homes and hotels.

Offices, shops, restaurants and banks were closed despite appeals by the military authorities to reopen. The airport was closed to civilian traffic. Only a few cars were on the streets.

The white rebels scattered after their movement foundered, but officials said many were arrested.

Authorities at Miguel Bombarda Hospital, where most civilian casualties were taken, said 21 persons died at the hospital and the bodies of 29 others had been brought in since Tuesday. All but nine of the dead were blacks, he said.

There were unconfirmed reports that as many as 200 were killed Tuesday after the collapse of a white settlers' rebellion against the Portuguese government's agreement to give control of the government to Frelimo, the black guerrilla movement that has been reported in the slums of Lourenco Marques, but reinforced Portuguese troops appeared to be getting control of Mozambique's seaside capital.

Hundreds of soldiers were flown from central and northern Mozambique throughout the day on Wednesday.

The troops sealed off parts of the city shortly before midnight as sporadic looting broke out again in the African quarters. But military authorities said the situation was calmer than on Tuesday night.

The hospital said most of the injuries were inflicted by knives, stones or machetes, but there were also several shotgun wounds.

Would-be Soviet college students feel pinch

by LYNNE OLSON
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — "I haven't done much of anything since June," Valery said wearily. "I've spent all that time — well most of it — cramming for exams."

Like hordes of other 1974 Soviet high school graduates, Valery was preparing for a crucial series of tests, administered nationwide in August, which determined whether he would be allowed to embark on a higher education.

For 940,000 students, the pressure-ridden exams in four or five subjects, culminating 10 years of study, ended in triumph. Those students — about 20 per cent of the high school graduating class — were admitted to beginning studies at the Soviet Union's 845 universities and institutes.

But there were thousands of others who either failed or did not score high enough to compete with other applicants at the institutions which they hoped to attend.

It's the college crunch — Soviet style. A recent Soviet educational study said that on the average, higher schools accept one of three applicants, but the Ivy League schools of the Soviet Union, such as Moscow State University and the University of Leningrad, and some prestigious institutes and art schools have a much higher turn-down rate.

For those who are not admitted to higher schools, as the magazine Moskva put it, the experience is a "catastrophe of life."

Soviet students start preparing for the entrance exams as early as three years before they actually take them, the magazine said.

"They do not imagine any other way for themselves," Moskva soberly concluded. "Not all of them know what speciality they will study but they have taken the institute for granted. Parents hire teachers for them who, in their opinion, know every question usually asked at the entrance examinations."

The exams, most of which are given orally over about a two-week period, are more important than the American college board tests because they're the prime criterion for college admission.

Komsomolskaya Pravda, a Soviet youth newspaper, has been critical of the exam process, claiming it "sometimes hampers the possibility to give an objective assessment of the knowledge and capability of young people entering institutions."

In an effort to overcome this problem, a new set of entrance regulations was issued two years ago demanding that students' high school grades and evidence of their work and "conscientiousness" be taken more into account.

The high school admission squeeze stems partly from the fact that the Soviet Union has taken such giant strides in making higher education, previously a privilege of the rich, available to many more of its people. As a result, young people's expectations that they will go to higher schools have risen accordingly.

For the past few years, the Soviet Union has been trying to persuade some of its young people to opt for a job after secondary school graduation rather than try to go on to a higher school.

But, like their American counterparts, Soviet youth are increasingly shying away from the blue-collar or manual jobs and yearn for the prestige and the expected good employment won through a higher education diploma.

About half of the 4.6 million persons studying at higher education establishments do have jobs, attending classes in the evening or by correspondence. By Soviet law, they are given time off from their jobs to study and take examinations.

Of the 845 higher education institutions, only 62 are universities, a third not more than 10 years old. The remainder are highly specialized institutes, which concentrate on one of hundreds of fields, from mechanical engineering to languages to cinematography.

But even the universities are professional schools by American standards. With strong emphasis on sciences and technology rather than on general and broad scholarship and learning.

The intense desire for higher education has spawned a wide variety of abuses in the application procedure. The Soviet press is constantly critical of the use of political power and connections by parents to gain special privileges for their children.

Because tuition and dormitory lodging are free, students aren't hampered as much by finances in getting an education in the Soviet Union as they are in some countries.

About 75 per cent also receive a government stipend, ranging from 40 rubles upwards, but in most cases, it's not enough to cover all expenses. Most students will receive money and food packages from their parents.

Sheriff releases report

The total activities the Fayette County Sheriff's Department was involved in during the month of August, numbered 1,283. Of this sum, 518 were complaints received in the office, 400 involved the serving of jury notices, 95 were civil papers processed and 74 were those incarcerated and traffic tickets.

Out of the 65 traffic accidents investigated, 22 people sustained injuries and two persons died. There were also 33 larcenies reported, 11 burglaries and 12 incidents involving property destruction.

Sheriff Donald L. Thompson stated five of the 11 burglaries reported during the month of August have been cleared by arrest, as were six of the 33 larcenies. In all, 40 per cent of the criminal cases during August were solved by arrests.

Desert test center works on mass transit

By HOWARD BENEDICT
Associated Press Writer

PUEBLO, Colo. (AP) — Thirty miles east of Pueblo, amidst a semi-arid desert is a Buck Rogers world of modern buildings and sleek, powerful machines that look like spaceships.

They're possible forerunners of future mass transit systems to move people around at 300 miles or more an hour. They travel on rails, on cushions of air, on magnetic fields.

The Department of Transportation's High Speed Ground Test Center, which sprouted in the desert four years ago, is there to harness the latest technology to improve ground transportation, including present rail, future high speed rail and advanced systems.

Linear motors power two unconventional guided vehicles at the center: a tracked air cushion vehicle (TACV) and a tracked levitated vehicle (TLV).

The TACV, designed to carry 60 passengers at speeds up to 150 miles per hour, uses the air exhaust from three jet engines for lifting itself a few inches above its five-mile long unshaped guideway.

The TLV, built for speeds up to 300 m.p.h., may be levitated magnetically as well as by air on its 21.8-mile guideway.

The department recently awarded Ford Motor Co. a $2.1 million contract for development and testing of a vehicle that could ride on a magnetic field above a single aluminum rail. It could lead to streamlined vehicles that would move along one foot above a guide rail at 300 m.p.h. or more in the mid or late 1980s.

The vehicle would be pollution-free and quiet. Rail maintenance costs would be reduced substantially because of lack of friction between the craft and the rail.

The Ford vehicle will use electromagnets to keep floating above the rail, but its propulsion will come from rockets. It will use rubber wheels to support itself at speeds under 50 m.p.h.

Department officials feel such a transportation system would be ideal for transit between cities. Representatives of several communities in the United States and abroad are watching testing developments at the center.

ment. Included are different types and length of rail. With old fashioned wood ties costing $20 each these days, the durability of concrete ties is being examined.

A nine-mile transit loop, with an electrified third rail, is used by the Federal Railroad Administration to develop portable instrumentation for on-the-spot diagnosing of track condition, to evaluate improved subway cars, to perfect hybrid electrical-gas turbine propulsion for rapid transit cars and to study energy storage systems for subway systems, using a flywheel concept.

Branching off one of the main tracks is a nearly mile-long spur where the impact of collisions and derailments is studied. Emphasis presently is on train-auto accidents at grade crossings.

"These tests are aimed at improving ride comfort, safety, reliability and speed," Reiff said. "Through these tests we are developing the technology of systems which can provide the basis for transportation system decisions for the next two decades."

Washington seeks 16th straight win

Stiff test for Lions in Chillicothe

By LARRY WATTS

Record-Herald Sports Editor

When Washington Court House ventures to Chillicothe this Friday evening, the Blue Lions will be hoping for a reenactment of the tale of 'David and Goliath', as they seek their 16th consecutive victory.

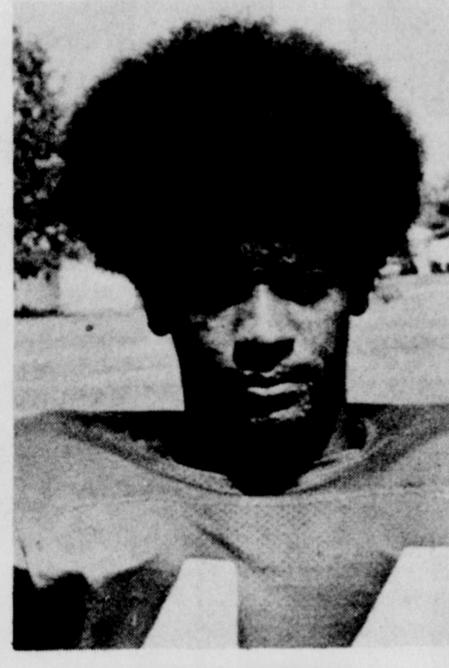

The series between Chillicothe and Washington has grown to become one of the strongest non-league rivalries for both schools. In the 51 previous meetings, the Cavaliers have won 31 and there have been four ties.

In the nine seasons coach Maurice Pfeifer has been at the helm of the Lions, Washington is carrying a 6-1-2 mark in the series. Chillicothe last defeated Court House in 1969 and the Blue Lions easily dumped the Cavaliers by a 27-0 margin last season.

"They frightened me to death," coach Pfeifer remarked as he looked over the Cavaliers' mammoth lineup, which contains 19 lettermen. "On paper, they are bigger and stronger at every position than we are."

Cards nip Mets in marathon

NEW YORK (AP) — The National League has no curfew, which explains why the St. Louis Cardinals and New York Mets were playing baseball at 3:10 a.m., EDT, Thursday morning.

And Bake McBride was getting a little tired waiting around for something to happen, which explains why the Cardinals won a 4-3 decision in 25 innings, the second longest game in major league history.

McBride had opened the 25th — yes, 25th — with an infield single and was leading off first base when Cards' Manager Red Schoendienst flashed the hit-and-run sign. "I was leaning," said McBride, "leaning back on my heels, resting."

He was entitled to the breather. After all, he'd been in center field from the start, some seven hours earlier. Hank Webb, the sixth Mets' pitcher, decided a pickoff throw might be a good idea. It was, but where Webb threw it wasn't.

Birmingham dealt first league loss

By HOWARD SINGER

AP Sports Writer

The rookie World Football League — newly embarked on the second half of its 20-game season — no longer has any unbeaten or winless teams.

The Memphis Southmen rolled to a 46-7 victory Wednesday night to hand the Birmingham Americans their first loss. And the Detroit Wheels upset the Florida Blazers 15-14 for their first victory.

In the other WFL games, New York downed Portland 34-15, Southern California defeated Chicago 31-28, Philadelphia bombed Jacksonville 41-22 in overtime and the Hawaiians edged Houston 24-17.

"You can't ever feel secure against a team like Birmingham," said Coach John McVay of the Southmen after the victory in Memphis before 30,675 spectators revenged an earlier 58-33 loss to the Americans.

Flanker Ed Marshall of Memphis snared three touchdown passes — two of them from quarterback John Huarte and one from running back John Harvey. The Southmen defenders made three key interceptions.

Locked in a tight WFL Central Division race, Birmingham, 10-1, and Memphis, 9-2, hold the best won-loss records in the league.

In Orlando, Fla., a six-yard touchdown run by rookie Billy Sadler and his subsequent action-point pass reception eventually became the decisive points for Detroit in its 15-14 victory over Florida.

But the Wheels, 1-10, got a bad scare in the fourth quarter after Tommy Reardon of the Blazers, 7-4, scored on a one-yard plunge. Detroit had to stop an action point pass that could have tied it.

The unexpected loss plunged Florida into a tie with New York, 7-4, in their battle for first place in the WFL Eastern Division.

"Our defensive line really played the way we knew they could, which I feel was a turning point in the game for us," said Coach Babe Parilli after the Stars handcuffed Portland's offense.

Against Portland, 2-7-1, Jim Ford of New York scored on a pair of one-yard plunges. Stars' quarterback Tom Sherman, who led the marches that set up Ford's scores, also tossed for another TD.

Southern California, 7-4, got by Chicago, 7-3, when Tony Adams hit

The high throw got past first baseman John Milner for an error and McBride was on his way. "I figured I could get to third," he said, "Then, when I turned second, I said to myself, 'I'm going all the way.'"

McBride steamed around third, never looking for a stop or go sign from coach Vern Benson. "He was going too fast to see any sign anyway," decided Benson.

Milner retrieved the ball and threw to the plate and McBride slid across just as catcher Ron Hodges dropped the ball.

In other National League games, the Philadelphia Phillies topped the Pittsburgh Pirates 8-5, the Los Angeles Dodgers nipped the San Francisco Giants 5-4, the San Diego Padres tripped the Houston Astros 2-0, and the Montreal Expos swept the Chicago Cubs 6-1 and 13-4 in a twi-night doubleheader, and the Atlanta Braves

Cincinnati Reds game was rained out with the score tied 1-1 in the fifth inning.

As plate umpire Ed Sudol signalled him safe, McBride lay on the ground, seemingly stunned that the tie-breaking run had finally scored.

Reds bid farewell to Braves' Aaron

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Cincinnati bids farewell today to that skinny kid who broke into baseball 20 years ago at Crosley Field with an undistinguished 0-for-5 effort.

"Like any other rookie, I kept my bags packed," remembered Hank Aaron. "I didn't know whether I was going back to the minor leagues or not."

Aaron is expected to start in one of today's doubleheader games between the Cincinnati Reds and Atlanta Braves.

The 17-time All-Star slugger makes his last stop as a player in what he describes as "a city I hold dear."

The doubleheader was necessary when heavy rain washed out Wednesday night's game between the clubs. The game will be replayed completely today.

The game was called after a two hour and 17 minute delay with the score tied at 1-1 after five innings. Aaron did not play.

A crowd of 22,997 pushed Reds attendance past the two million mark for the second straight year.

Aaron, the king of baseball's home run hitters made his major league debut in Cincinnati in 1954. It was the first of many historic remembrances of Boog Powell's run-scoring pinch-single in the 17th inning of the opener of a twi-night doubleheader gave the Baltimore Orioles a 3-2 victory, but Larry Gura's five-hit pitching led the New York Yankees to a 5-1 triumph in the nightcap.

The split of the doubleheader kept the Yankees two games ahead of second-place Baltimore in the hot American League East race. Cleveland beat Boston 3-1, dropping the Red Sox 2½ games off the pace and putting the Indians just five games out.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota beat Oakland 5-3 in 10 innings, Texas trimmed Chicago 6-2, California edged Kansas City 3-2 in 10 innings and Milwaukee blanked Detroit 3-0.

Gura, purchased on Aug. 18 from Syracuse of the International League, raised his record with the Yankees to 3-3.

Gura yielded a run in the first inning, then shut the door on the Orioles. The Yankees went ahead with four runs in the second when Sandy Alomar and Jim Mason hit RBI singles. Elliott Maddox was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded and Lou Piniella rapped a sacrifice fly.

Roy White accounted for the final run with his fifth homer of the season in the ninth.

The opener, a four hour, 12 minute marathon marked by arguments and missed scoring opportunities, ended when Powell singled following two walks off relief pitcher Cecil Upshaw, 1-6.

Indians 3, Red Sox 1

Indians pitching star Gaylord Perry stopped Boston on five hits in posting his 19th victory against 10 losses.

Twins 5, A's 3

Harmon Killebrew slugged his 13th home run of the season in the 10th inning, a two-run shot on the first pitch from Darold Knowles that gave the Twins a 5-3 victory.

Rangers 6, White Sox 2

Jim Bibby pitched a four-hitter for his 19th victory of the season and Jim Spencer drove in two runs with two singles as the second-place Rangers moved to within ½ games of Oakland in the AL West.

Angels 3, Royals 2

Nolan Ryan stopped Kansas City on four hits and struck out 15, outdueling Kansas City's Al Fitzmorris. Morris Nettles led off the 10th with a single, was sacrificed to second, stole third and scored when Bruce Bochte beat out a single to shortstop.

Brewers 3, Tigers 0

Jim Slaton handcuffed the Tigers on five hits. Milwaukee got a run in the first inning on Don Money's single, made it 2-0 in the seventh on an RBI single by Tim Johnson and got its final run in the eighth on two walks and George Scott's runscoring single.

Essex Johnson doubtful starter

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — Veteran running back Essex Johnson, still suffering from an ailing knee, is a doubtful starter for the Cincinnati Bengals in their regular season opener Sunday against the Cleveland Browns Lions' offensive unit will have to be more consistent than it was in Washington's 8-6 win over Bishop Ready last week. The Silver Knights controlled nearly every offensive statistic, except the scoreboard.

"Our offensive line had a good game," Pfeifer pointed out. "However, the line did not do a good job of cutting down Ready's pursuit. Our offense has to do a better job of establishing a ground game this week."

Right tackle Dan Dean, who is 6-foot and weighs 189 pounds, was selected as the offensive lineman of the week. Dean rated a 76 per cent on his blocking efficiency against the Silver Knights.

Sophomore Leroy Wilson, who was playing in his first varsity game, was the choice as the offensive back of the week. The 5-foot-10, 158-pound tailback carried the ball 20 times for 74 yards and the Lions' lone touchdown.

Defensive guard Brian Haines, who is 5-foot-9 and 157 pounds, was chosen as the defensive lineman of the week for the Blue Lions. He achieved a 95 per cent defensive rating on 20 plays and was credited with the best pursuit of the evening. Haines had two unassisted tackles and helped out on two other tackles.

Gilbert Sparkman, the Lions' 5-foot-4 and 135-pound invert, achieved defensive back of the week honors.

Sparkman, who delivered the hardest hit of the game, was instrumental in shutting off the Silver Knights' sweep. He had three unassisted tackles and assisted on four others.

"Our defense has to play as good as it did last week," Pfeifer continued. "We had our best pass rush of the season, which includes scrimmages; but we can not afford to give up the big play."

Pfeifer has made some minor offensive adjustments, which he hopes will strengthen his defense. Jim Vess and Dewey Foster, who go both on offense and defense, will concentrate more on defense this week. Randy Dean will take Vess' place at halfback and Mark Stewart will see some action in Foster's messenger split end position. The move will help keep fresher players on the field for the Lions.

Fullback Larry Dumford, who is also a linebacker on defense, will be given a rest on offense at times. Gilbert Sparkman and Scott Johnson will fill in on Dumford's rest periods.

"I am curious to know if we can survive this game with our little kids," remarked Pfeifer. "It will be our quickness against their size and strength. If we are consistent all the way around, Chillicothe will beat Chillicothe."

Dolphins top selection in AFC

Baseball standings

By BEN THOMAS

AP Sports Writer

What will Coach Don Shula and the Miami Dolphins do for an encore? Why, they will take another bow, that's what.

As the National Football League heads into the 1974 campaign after a strike-plagued exhibition season, there may be new dynasties aborning in the league. But this Pro Pigskin Picker can not see anybody but the Dolphins repeating as champions of both the American Football Conference East Division and the AFC as well.

Buffalo may rise up to challenge the Dolphins in the AFC East and could make the playoffs as a wild-card team.

Pittsburgh and Cincinnati will slug it out for the AFC Central title and Oakland and Denver will do battle in the AFC West.

Here is the way the AFC shapes up, by divisions:

AFC EAST

Miami Dolphins

Buffalo Bills

New York Jets

Baltimore Colts

New England Patriots

The Dolphins still have Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Paul Warfield this season. Their defection to the World Football League doesn't come until next year. In addition, there is quarterback Bob Griese, who makes the Miami offense go.

And don't forget that magnificent offensive line that opened up those gaping holes in the Minnesota defense in the Super Bowl last January.

Their names, in case you've forgotten, are Wayne Moore, Bob Kuechenberg, Jim Langer, Larry Little and Norm Evans.

If that isn't enough, the Dolphins have one of the better defenses in the league, including the likes of Manny Fernandez, Bill Stanfill, Vern Den Herder, Jake Scott, Dick Anderson, Nick Buoniconti, Mike Kolen and Doug Swift.

Buffalo won't be simply O.J. Simpson this year. That's not to say that Juice won't gain a lot of yards, but probably not as many as the 2,003 he got in his record-breaking 1973 showing.

The Bills have the material this year to diversity and that is what Coach Lou Saban must do if Buffalo is to stay within sight of the Dolphins and have a shot at the wild-card playoff berth.

Young Joe Ferguson, along with veteran Scott Hunter, are both capable of moving Buffalo through the air and they've got J.D. Hill, Ahmad Rashad and Bob Chandler to catch the ball.

It's really a toss up as to who will finish third, fourth and fifth in the division.

The Jets have not been competitive in recent years because of a porous defense and Joe Namath's injuries.

This season the team starts out with Namath as healthy as his brittle legs will permit and hopes that the addition of big Carl Barzilaukas will bolster the defense. Unfortunately, however, the only Winner on the team could be Charley, the new coach, and son-in-law of Weeb Ewbank, who gave up the coaching reins after last season but will remain as general manager.

Marty Domres and Bert Jones apparently will share the quarterbacking chores for the Colts, who are still rebuilding. But Coach Howard Schnellenberger is optimistic, even though he admits his defensive secondary "is perhaps the youngest in football."

The Patriots have a tough schedule, including games against the Dolphins, Los Angeles and Minnesota right at the start. But Jim Plunkett looked great in his final exhibition appearance and says he is facing the season with optimism. Unfortunately for Coach Chuck Fairbanks, optimism is about all the Patriots really have, in addition to Plunkett.

AFC CENTRAL

Pittsburgh Steelers
Cincinnati Bengals
Cleveland Browns
Houston Oilers

Pittsburgh and Cincinnati will be in the trenches throughout the season as they fight for supremacy of the Central Division. In the end, the Steelers should emerge on top and the Bengals will have to hope they have a better record than Buffalo does for the wild-card playoff spot.

Terry Bradshaw, the Blond Bomber, may not be the Steelers' No. 1 quarterback. Joe Gilliam has been battling for that designation and may just get it as the season progresses. No matter if it's Bradshaw, Gilliam or Terry Hanratty throwing the ball, the Steelers have plenty of catchers — Ron Shanklin, Frank Lewis and rookie Lynn Swann, to name a few.

Franco Harris, Freney Fuqua and Preston Pearson give the Steelers a triple threat running attack.

And the Pittsburgh defense features just standouts as Mean Joe Greene, L.C. Greenwood, Jack Ham, Mike Wagner and Andy Russell.

Cincinnati also has a creditable offense as well as a good defense. But the offense doesn't quite seem to have the same blue-ribbon qualities that the Steeler attack does. Nevertheless, quarterback Ken Anderson's throwing to Isaac Curtis and the running of Boobie Clark and Essex Johnson should put points on the scoreboard for Cincinnati.

Cleveland is hoping Greg Pruitt's exciting running can make the Browns a power once again. But the Browns no longer have a Larry Csonka-type runner. Mike Phipps will do the quarterbacking and in Jubilee Dunbar, a recent acquisition from New Orleans, he has a pretty fair catcher.

Then there are the Houston Oilers, who have won two games in two years.

Sid Gillman, the team's general manager-coach, vows to "win at any cost." Even though Oiler owner Bud Adams is rich, he may not have THAT much money.

AFC WEST

Denver
Oakland
Kansas City
San Diego

The Broncos are the pick from this corner to emerge on top of the heap in the West, with the Raiders in close pursuit. Kansas City may make threatening noises from time to time, but not nearly enough to get a piece of the action.

The quarterbacking of Charley Johnson, who will be aiming at Riley Odoms and Haven Moses when he throws the ball, and handing off to Floyd Little for ground gains, should provide the Broncos with an exciting offense. And the schedule helps, too.

Randy Grandishar, the Broncos' No. 1 pick from Iowa State, will bolster the Denver defense, which also includes all-pro tackle Paul Smith and defensive end Lyle Alzado. The Denver defense should improve vastly, and it must, if the team is to win the division.

The Raiders still look solid.

In Ken Stabler, Oakland has a quarterback who can throw with the best of them. Even though he is defecting to the World Football League in 1976, he would like to lead the Raiders to the Super Bowl.

He'll have plenty of offensive help: catchers Fred Biletnikoff, Mike Siana, Cliff Branch and Bob Moore; and runners Marv Hubbard, Charlie Smith and Clarence Davis.

Defensively, the Raiders have the likes of Jim Otto, Gene Upshaw, Otis Sistrunk, Nemiah Wilson and Jack Tatum, to name only a few.

Kansas City's Chiefs are getting older and there does not seem to be many top-drawer replacements in the wings, with the possible exception of rookie runner Woody Green.

This could be Len Dawson's final year at quarterback. Also aging are Otis Taylor and Ed Podolak.

San Diego may battle Houston for the worst-in-the-AFC title. The Chargers will be quarterbacked by either Jesse Freitas or Dan Fouts. And there may be some wholesale trading in the offing before the team starts to shape up.

Is He Looking For Cancer?

When a sigmoid examination is suggested by a doctor does that mean he is looking for a cancer?

Mr. T.M.T., Ill.

The sigmoid is a portion of the large intestine that leads to the rectal opening. Every patient over 30 has a rectal examination included in a "complete physical."

So important is this examination that no physical checkup can be complete without it.

Occasionally, a special type of examination of the large bowel is done with a sigmoidoscope. Although moderately unpleasant, the examination is not a painful one.

The benefits to be derived outweigh the discomfort. By looking through this instrument, the mucous membrane lining of the lower portion of the large intestine can be inspected for infection, inflammation, tumors, polyps, or bleeding.

The fact that your doctor wants to do this examination does not mean that he is "looking for cancer." Rather, he will be seeking answers to the problems you present to him.

It is pointless to delay this sigmoidoscopy because of anxiety.

Even after a good night's sleep I get a sudden feeling of drowsiness. It happens most often when I am at work.

Miss V.R., N.Y.

Dear Miss R.: I am sure there are those who would immediately infer that you are simply bored with your job.

However, I would urge you to seek other reasons for your drowsiness. Poor ventilation in a room or excess humidity in a very warm room may be responsible for a lethargic, sleepy feeling, especially after eating a heavy lunch.

People with low blood pressure may have episodes of drowsiness. Fumes, heavy concentrations of tobacco smoke, and drugs, especially antihistamines, may be a factor.

It should not be too difficult to track down the reason for your complaint, never forgetting that the reason could be a psychological one.

SPEAKING OF YOUR HEALTH... Recovery from disease is not complete until the patient believes it, and begins to enjoy his good health. To keep harping on his illness or operation will prolong invalidism.
